Rail Engineers Turn Down 3-Year Pact

Dulles Voices Difference With Hoover On Defense

GOP Consultant To State Dept. Calls Gibraltar Concept 'Folly'

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

John Foster Dulles spoke up last night against abandoning western Europe and trying to build American security in the western hemisphere.

The Republican consultant to the State Department thus became the second prominent member of his party to attack the ideas advanced last week by Herbert Hoover. The other was Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon, who denounced the Hoover program a week ago.

"It is possible," said Dulles, "to plan, on paper, and describe in words, what it seems should be an impregnable defense—a China Wall, a Maginot Line, a Rock of Gibralter, an Atlantic and Pacific moat.

"But the mood that plans such a defense carries within itself the seeds of its own collapse. A defense that accepts encirclement quickly decomposes. That has been proved a thousand times.

"A United States which could be an inactive spectator while the barbarians overran and descrated the cradle of our civilization would not be the kind of United States which could defend itself."

Dulles spoke in New York at a dinner of the American Association for the United Nations, and his words were broadcast nationally. His speech was not a direct answer to Hoover, for it did not mention the former President by name.

Attacks "Gibraltar" Concept

But there was no mistaking its references to Hoover's ideas. Hoover had called for national policies that would make the Western Hemisphere a "Gibraltar of Western civilization," and Dulles did not hesitate to attack the "Gibraltar" concept as folly.

At the same time—and this may have brought some comfort to Hoover and his friends—Dulles said the American people "do not want to be committed to Koreas all around the globe." He thought it impossible to build an impregnable defense in every one of the 20 nations along the 20,000-mile frontier of the Soviet Union.

Because of Dulles' special status in the State Department, his speech did not have to be cleared in advance and was not an official State Department pronouncement. As for the Republicans, Chairman Guy Gabrielson of the Republican National Committee said Dulles did not speak for the party.

Much of Dulles' speech contradicted Republican campaign arguments that the United States had floundered and bungled in its foreign policy of the past five years. He conceded that the record was not perfect, and that there was a

Beagle and Bunny Canned Together For Four Days

CHARDON, Ohio, Dec. 29 (AP).—Queenie, a beagle hound, and her inseparable pal, Blackie, just a dog, were missing four days.

Then two small boys spotted Blackie—whining and obviously worried. He led them to Queenie, lying in the brush, her head firmly wedged in a five-gallon can.

The boys took Queenie on a sled to the home of Harley Smith, nearby. Smith snipped open the can and freed Queenie, hungry but still all right.

At the bottom of the can was the explanation: a live half-grown rabbit was crouched there, just out of Queenie's reach.

Youth, 19, and Boy, 7, Killed In Accidents Laid to Weather

ROBERT M. CUSHMAN
Dead in Crash

DONALD CLATTERBUCK
Dead in a Fall

Two deaths were attributed yesterday to Greater Washington's freezing rain, which turned roads and sidewalks into glassy sheets of ice during the early morning hours.

Killed when the car in which he was riding skidded into a telephone pole in Takoma Park, Md., was Robert M. Cushman, 19, of 10105 Lorain ave., Silver Spring, a well-known high school athlete here.

Fatally injured when he slipped and fell from the porch of his home while running to greet his father, was seven-year-old Donald R. Clatterbuck, of 611 E. Columbia st., Falls Church. He died of a broken neck.

Scores of motorists ended up with dented fenders as their cars skidded around while they tried to make it home at a snail's pace late Thursday night and early yesterday.

Scores of pedestrians suffered injuries, both serious and minor, as they slipped on steps and sidewalks.

The Cushman youth was riding in a car driven by Walter Chamblin, 19, of 405 Brewster ave., Silver Spring, when it skidded on the ice. Chamblin was trying to pass a truck on University la. near Anne st. in Takoma Park, police said.

The car spun around several times, then crashed into the telephone pole. Both youths were taken to Washington Sanitarium, where Cushman died shortly after arrival. Chamblin was admitted there with serious injuries.

Cushman had been the star of the Montgomery Blair High School football team for three years. He was named All-State fullback for two years and in 1948 won the Andy Farkas Trophy and the Lions Club Trophy as best football player of the year.

While at Montgomery Blair, he was a four-letter man in football, track, basketball and baseball. After his graduation, he went to Brown University for a year, but was attending Montgomery Junior College in Takoma Park this year.

His family said both he and Chamblin, who is attending the University of Maryland, had been buddies ever since they met while attending Takoma Junior High School. Both worked together in the Silver Spring Postoffice during the holidays.

At the time of the accident, Cushman and Chamblin were on their way home after attending an alumni group meeting at Montgomery Blair.

Cushman was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard C. Cushman. His father is a pharmacist with Maxwell and Tennyson. Besides his parents, he is survived by two brothers, Howard, jr., and Charles.

The Clatterbuck boy had run out on the side porch of his home to greet his father, Robert L. Clatterbuck, a wholesale dairy truck

$63,503 Won, $35,840 Lost Md. Election

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

It took $63,503.06 to win and $35,840.77 to lose the Maryland Senatorial election.

The larger figure was the total of expenditures reported by Republican Senator-elect John Marshall Butler.

The smaller was the spending total reported by defeated Senator Millard E. Tydings, Democrat.

The reports were made to the Secretary of the Senate.

In Butler's report, contributions totaling $55,813.61 were listed, or $7689.45 less than the amount spent. Included in the spending total was a $25,263.41 item called "unpaid accounts." Tydings' report showed contributions equal to expenses.

Investigators of the Senate elections subcommittee headed by Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa) have gone into some phases of the Butler report.

According to Senator Andrew F. Schoeppel (R., Kans.), a member of the Gillette group, the material so far presented has not shown a first-hand case of a violation of the election laws.

One item underscored by the investigators in their reports to the Gillette committee was an $8300 loan by C. F. Tuttle, former president of the Rustless Iron & Steel Co., to the Butler organization. Cornelius P. Mundy, treasurer of the Butler campaign, signed a note for that amount, payable on demand to Tuttle at the Mercantile Trust Co., Baltimore, and a similar note for $4200 to A. C. Levering. Both notes were dated November 13. They were listed in the contributions as well as in the "unpaid accounts."

Photostats of the notes were attached to the report, as well as a photostat of a letter on Tuttle's stationery signed by him and Levering telling Treasurer Mundy: "In answer to your inquiry we wish to advise that in making the loans to you we were acting as underwriters of the apparent deficit in your accounts. We expect, we are confident, that all or a large part of these amounts will be reimbursed to us by others, but at the present time we cannot advise you as to the individuals or the respective amounts."

The Butler roster of unpaid accounts also showed a $1000 loan due to Jacob France, Republican National Committeeman for Maryland; $1900 due Walter Abell and $1400 due Stanley Sherr.

It listed $5000 unpaid to Ruth Miller. There was no further identification.

Mrs. Ruth McCormick Miller, editor of the Washington Times Herald, sent a $5000 check to Butler and it was turned over to a Baltimore printer, William H. Fedder, according to the letter, a few days before election.

This check was part of a pay-

5000 Reds Push Allies 3 to 8 Miles

New Thrust Made Near East Coast; Outposts Moved Closer to Seoul

FIFTH AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS, Korea, Saturday, Dec. 30 (U.P.). — American F-86 Sabre jet planes shot down a Russian-made MIG15 jet fighter and probably destroyed another in an air battle over North Korea today.

TOKYO (Saturday), Dec. 30 (AP).—A force of 5000 Communists troops drove back United Nations troops 3 to 8 miles on the eastern Korea front yesterday, the United States Eighth Army said today.

A briefing officer said the strong Red force was 32 miles inland from the east coast and 10 to 12 miles south of the thirty-eighth parallel.

This is the same general area where U. N. withdrawals were reported the day before.

There still was no sign of the big Red push which Allied officers believe will come soon.

In the west, the Chinese and North Korean Communists continued their big buildup. They moved ever closer to Seoul, the menaced capital of South Korea.

The peninsula-wide front was reported relatively quiet, aside from the action near the eastern end. Patrol activity continued.

"The enemy continues to probe and reconnoiter in the forward areas, resulting in patrol clashes with U. N. troops," an Eighth Army spokesman said.

"Elements of U. N. units on the right central sector of the line advanced 1000 to 1500 yards against no enemy resistance."

The spokesman did not pinpoint the scenes of that advance.

One U. N. patrol north of the frozen Imjin River—which is the Allied defense line in the west—fought a four-hour skirmish with a Chinese Communist company just south of parallel thirty-eight. The U. N. troops withdrew, reporting they killed 21 and wounded 15 Chinese Reds.

Planes of the United States Far East Air Force resumed their constant pounding of the enemy in clear weather at dawn today. In some 450 sorties Friday they inflicted an estimated 500 enemy casualties.

Chinese army outposts moved up snugly against the Imjin River in the west, 10 miles south of the parallel and 25 miles northwest of Seoul.

The enemy moves came as a huge Chinese and North Korean force continued building up under heavy Allied air attack for a mass assault which General MacArthur has predicted will come between January 1 and 10.

Associated Press Correspondent Hal Boyle reported from the front that an attack by 10,000 North Korean Reds through the east-central sector of the line had been contained after gaining 3 miles at points 4 to 5 miles below the old thirty-eighth parallel boundary of North and South Korea.

An Eighth Army spokesman also said the enemy had shoved 10 miles beyond the parallel at an undisclosed point 25 miles inland from the coast. Fighting for

Rigid Controls On Cobalt Use To Curtail TV

ESA to Set Up Area Offices to Handle Wage, Price Problems

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The National Production Authority yesterday placed complete and detailed controls on the distribution and use of virtually all cobalt, a scarce and strategic metal vital to defense industry.

Beginning February 1, all users of cobalt, except those who buy less than 25 pounds at a time must obtain a specific Government approval for each purchase. Cobalt is the first article which the NPA has placed under such a complete allocation system.

NPA officials said the action would hit the radio and television manufacturers "extremely hard"—cobalt is used in making speakers—and would affect many other civilian products, particularly those using certain paints, enamels and metal coatings.

A spokesman for the Radio-Television Manufacturers Association said the order will affect actual production of sets perhaps about March. Meanwhile the industry is doing all it can to switch to other types of speakers but it can't be done overnight, the officials said.

Unfamiliar as such to the ordinary citizen, cobalt has great industrial importance in electronics manufacturing. It is also vital as an alloy to harden steel in cut-

West's Defenses Given Boost

France and Yugoslavia Vote Record Military Spending

Belgrade Government Pledges U. N. Support, Indicts Red Chinese

BELGRADE, Dec. 29 (AP).—Foreign Minister Edvard Kardelj told the Yugoslav Parliament tonight that the world is heading for a third world war.

He denounced Red China's intervention in Korea as "bringing the world a step nearer to a new world war" and added:

"Crossing the thirty-eighth parallel in Korea by Chinese troops places upon the government of China and all those who support it a mighty responsibility before history."

Parliament, at its closing session, unanimously adopted a national budget for 1951 containing a record military appropriation of 582 million dollars. Kardelj joined other government leaders in supporting the outlay as necessary to defend the country against the threat of invasion by the Soviet Union and its Cominform satellites.

The Foreign Minister declared that world peace "can be saved only by following the principles of the United Nations."

He denounced as a fraud Moscow's claims that Soviet foreign policy is "serving progress." He charged that Russia is using revolutionary movements, especially in Asia, to impose its own domination upon other nations.

Kardelj said there are signs that Russia and Red China may clash in rivalry for the domination of Asia, but added that this is "a germ of controversy" for the future rather than anything already disclosed.

He offered a four-point proposal for peace in Korea:

1. A cease-fire and maintenance of the thirty-eighth parallel as a dividing line between North and South Korea.

2. Establishment of a U. N. commission to supervise elections for a government of a united Korea.

3. Gradual withdrawal of all foreign troops from Korea and the lifting of the "blockade of Formosa."

4. Admission of Red China to the U. N.

Two-Billion-Dollar French Arms Budget To Aid Europe's Army

PARIS, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—The National Assembly tonight approved a record 740 billion franc ($2,114,000,000) military budget for next year, including 355 billion francs ($1,014,000,000) to be spent on France's contribution to the Atlantic Pact army.

The Assembly fixed the total amount to be spent in the military—30 percent of the national budget—during an article by article vote on the bill. The article, the first of more than a dozen up before the Assembly, was approved by a vote of 416 to 180.

The vote came just after Premier Pleven warned the deputies that France "cannot stay disarmed before a possible menace."

Still up for debate was the disputed second article of the bill, which called for financing part of the rearmament effort with 145 billion francs (about 487 million dollars) in new taxes.

Pleven called for a vote of confidence on the second article. Under the French constitution one full day must elapse between the posing of a confidence motion and the actual vote. It was expected the vote will take place just after midnight Saturday or early Sunday morning.

France has barely started to build the 20-division army she promised her allies as her share in the Atlantic army and, observers feared, it will not be ready in time.

Supported by United States arms, equipment and credits next year totaling up to $2,400,000,000, the government pledged to have 10 divisions trained and equipped by the end of 1951 and the other 10 by the end of 1953.

But so far French rearmament is mostly on paper. Aside from the budget approved today, all that France has to show in the way of concrete achievement is an increase in the length of military service, from 12 to 18 months.

Equipment of France's existing five divisions, four of them with American arms, is going forward slowly.

Union Calls For 'More Favorable' Provisions

White House Accord To End Long Dispute Still to Be Taken Up By 3 Other Groups

CLEVELAND, Dec. 29 (AP). General chairman of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers late today instructed the officers of their union to "go back to Washington" to negotiate "more favorable terms" in a proposed three-year peace pact with the American railroads.

Following a two-day session of the union's chairmen, Grand Chief Engineer James P. Shields issued a terse statement refering to a peace plan reached in Washington December 21.

"They fully analysed the Washington memorandum of December 21 and have instructed the grand chief and his negotiating committee to go back to Washington to negotiate the terms of that memorandum into a more favorable settlement."

He declined to elaborate on his statement. The BLE has not taken a strike vote. The railroads have been under control of the Government since August 26. The Government took them over to prevent the spreading of a strike by trainmen and conductors.

The plan, as announced at Washington by Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman, involved the Engineers and three other operating brotherhoods—the Firemen, the Trainmen and the Conductors.

General chairmen of the three other unions have been called into session here and at St. Louis within the next 10 days to consider the plan.

When the plan was announced at the White House, it had appeared that the long-standing dispute had been settled.

But later Shields said it had been made clear to Steelman that final consideration was up to union chairmen on each of the railroads.

There are about 80,000 members of the BLE.

A spokesman for the Conductors' brotherhood has said his union was dissatisfied with the plan. The Trainmen's official publication today declared that union probably would relunctantly approve it.

President David B. Robertson of the Firemen has declined comment.

The plan would give 120,000 yardmen a pay boost of 23 cents an hour immediately, another 2 cents January 1 and a cost of living adjustment every three months beginning next April 1.

It also calls for an immediate five-cent an hour boost for about 180,000 road service workers, another five cents January 1, and the same cost of living arrangement.

Both immediate boosts would be retroactive to October 1.

Radio for Sole Use of Church Denied License

A Federal Communications Commission examiner yesterday ruled a church may not be given a license for a radio station to be used solely in promoting its faith.

The examiner, J. D. Bond, said such a license would violate the Constitution's provisions for separation of church and state.

The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints had asked for a permit to build the broadcasting station at Independence, Mo. In recommending denial, Bond drew a distinction between this proposal and the several radio station grants which have been issued to other church groups for regular commercial radio stations which sell time on the air to others.

In contrast, he said, the Independence application called for a station to "be used completely to foster the religious and educational interests of the applicant on a non-commercial basis."

Tragic Homecoming for Two

Mother Dies at Front Door, Trapped in Burning House

By Jean Reiff
Post Reporter

A mother, alone at home, collapsed and died just inside the front door as she tried to flee from her burning house last night.

She was Mrs. Gertrude S. Lawshe, 42, of 3520 6th st. nw.

It was not until several hours after she was found dead that her husband, Theodore T. Lawshe, and their young son, 15-year-old Ted, returned home to learn of the tragedy.

The fire was discovered shortly after 8 p. m., by a passer-by, out walking her dog, who saw smoke coming from the windows of the Lawshe home. She ran next door, and Mrs. James O. Scott called firemen.

By the time they arrived, flames were belching from the basement windows of the two-story brick dwelling.

Forcing open the front door, the firemen found Mrs. Lawshe lying on the floor behind it. Apparently she had tried to escape, or attempted to reach the telephone in the hallway.

Mrs. Lawshe was carried to a neighbor's home, where she was pronounced dead, apparently from burns and smoke inhalation, by Dr. H. H. Leffler, of the Providence Hospital staff.

Police and firemen were unable to find her family immediately. They learned that one daughter, Joanne, 20, a student at the University of Maryland, had gone to Providence to stay with friends. Another daughter, Mrs. Mary Gay Shirley, 19, of 1900 F st. nw., left yesterday afternoon for New York City to visit her husband's family.

At 10:45, Ted came home, to be told by a family friend and a policeman that his mother was dead. Stunned, scarcely able to talk, the boy said he had last seen her about 4:30 in the afternoon.

The husband, an employe of the Kinsman Optical Co., arrived home by cab 15 minutes later. He collapsed in tears as a policeman met him in front of the house.

Honey, the family's cocker spaniel, lay dead on the living room hearth.

Alex Whiteman, acting Fourth Battalion chief, said the fire apparently started in an overstuffed living room sofa. The flaming sofa burned a hole in the floor and dropped into the basement, setting it afire. The first floor and basement were swept by flames, and the whole house was damaged by smoke and water.

George Washington's Surveys Called Remarkably Accurate

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

George Washington slipped here—but very slightly.

"Here" is in Arlington County.

More than a century and a half ago, Washington directed surveys laying down the boundaries of the new District of Columbia. It included what is now Arlington County.

When he came to survey what is now the county's southwest boundary, it appears that the Father of His Country did a remarkably accurate job, leaving just one little kink in the line.

To be brutally frank about the matter, Washington's boundary line—to this day marked by six stones—deviates from a true line by exactly zero degrees, 1 minute and 14 seconds at one bearing point.

Authority for this revelation is a tall, lean gentleman with vaguely Washingtonian features—J. R. Wigglesworth, chief of Arlington's survey department.

He should know. His surveyors just completed a year-long re-

Taft Lacks 'Great Confidence' In U. S. Military Leadership

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Dec. 29 (UP).—Senator Robert A. Taft, (R., Ohio), said today he had "no great confidence" in the judgment of this country's military leadership.

The feeling in Washington, he said, is "a kind of wavering between panic and reassurance that goes right on up to the Pentagon."

He told local Masons at their annual New Year's luncheon that after the recent reversals, the "situation in Korea was presented to [illegible] (Senate members) in secret as the most complete setback the United States has ever suffered."

"They doubted if we could hold out in Korea or could save Japan or the Philippines," the Republican policy spokesman said. "Now they have 250,000 Americans spread across Korea and they think they can defend indefinitely against two million Chinese.

"I have no great confidence in the judgment of the top military."

The Senator said there was little need for President Truman's declaration of a national emergency and sharply criticized the President for failing to consult with GOP leaders.

"When he did consult us, he didn't follow Republican advice that no declaration was needed without a complete program," Taft added.

Industry Planning Record Expansion

Business is planning to expand its facilities in 1951 by an all-time record amount, a joint Commerce Department-Securities and Exchange study disclosed yesterday.

The survey shows industry proposes to spend 21.9 billion bollars in 1951 for new plant and equipment, or 21 percent more than estimated expenditures for that purpose this year, and 14 percent above the previous reconrd, in 1948.

After allowing for the increase in cost of capital goods in 1950, the anticipated expenditures in 1951 will still be 17 percent higher, in physical volume, than those this year.

Manufacturing industries plan to spend about two-thirds of the total outlays, at a rate of 33 percent higher than this year. Iron and steel companies will double their outlays in 1951, railroads and mining companies will spend about 19 percent more, and transportation industries other than railroads will increase their expenditures 33 percent above 1950.

The record size of the proposed expansion of facilities and production capacity is seen as particularly significant from a defense point of view and for the economy as a whole. It suggests that business is committed to "expansionism" as an economic policy, and is proposing to carry it out with its own capital, without awaiting special Federal financing for military production facilities.

Fibs About Cold

Californian Is Adjudged Top U. S. Liar

BURLINGTON, Wis., Dec. 29 (AP). A Californian who wandered far afield for the locale of a weird weather story was crowned today as the world's champion liar of 1950.

Goulette

The Burlington Liars' Club picked this one by Frank J. Goulette, Alhambra, Calif., from a pack of lies submitted from all over the Nation and from foreign lands in its annual contest:

"One winter, while I was working on a pile driver in North Dakota it got so cold that one night a member of our crew froze to death in bed.

"The ground was frozen so hard that it was impossible to dig a grave. In fact, we never did find out how far down it was frozen. But this I do know: Seeing we couldn't dig a grave, we stood the fellow on his head under the pile-driver—and we had to drive on him seven days and seven nights before we got him down far enough for a decent burial.

The judges liked this one by Joseph Flynn, Cleveland, Ohio, enough to give it honorable mention:

"One night," Flynn lied, "when I was firing on the railroad, we got orders to go into a side track to let a passenger by. We had a long drag, including 65 carloads of canaries, and when we got the highball the engineer just couldn't get rolling—too much weight.

"I guess we would have been there yet if I hadn't solved the problem. Going back along the train I hung a lighted lantern in every one of those canary cars. The birds, thinking it was morning, flew off their perches. With the birds in the air we had enough weight off the wheels so that we could get going."

Judge Brown Withdraws In Bond Suit

Fairfax County Circuit Court Judge Paul E. Brown yesterday disqualified himself from hearing further arguments on the legality of issuing $11,380,000 in county school and courthouse bonds, approved in a public referendum last May.

Judge Brown stepped down at the request of Alfred J. Anton, an attorney representing Paul E. Rhinehart, jr., in the latter's suit to contest validity of the issue. Anton contended that since Judge Brown had entered the decrees and final orders setting up the bond referendum, he should not be called on to judge legality of the issue approved through the referendum.

The judge's disqualification terminated a scheduled hearing on motions by county attorneys to dismiss the Rhinehart suit on grounds it was filed after expiration of a legal deadline for contesting validity of the issue. The hearing was tentatively reset for January 10, pending assignment by the Virginia Supreme Court of an alternate judge to hear the case.

Rhinehart is seeking to invalidate a $10,500,000 bond issue for school construction and a $980,000 issue for a new courthouse addition, both approved in the May referendum. He alleges a successful annexation suit by Alexandria has removed from the county some of the residents who voted for the bond issue, and has placed on the remaining taxpayers a heavier debt load than they originally anticipated.

To counter the action, Fairfax has filed two separate suits to enjoin Rhinehart from proceeding further with his action. No date has been set for hearing of the injunction suits.

Thomas C. Blaisdell, jr., resigned yesterday as Assistant Secretary of Commerce. No reason was given by the White House in announcing the resignation.

Blaisdell is a native of Pittsburgh and a former teacher of economics in several universities. He has been in and out of Government service since 1933 and has been in the Commerce Department since May 1948.

He headed the department's international trade activities. He called on President Truman yesterday with Secretary of Commerce Sawyer shortly before his resignation was made public.

It was reported Blaisdell told the President he has received "an extremely challenging offer" from the University of California.

Dr. Lyon Sues For Third of Wife's Estate

A suit to break a trust made by his wife and to obtain a one-third share of her estate was filed in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, Md., yesterday by Dr. James Alexander Lyon, Washington heart specialist.

Dr. Lyon seeks to have a trust made in favor of his daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Moore Lyon Kelley, set aside as not representing his wife's "real intent." The trust was set up by the wife, Mrs. Irene Elizabeth Moore Lyon, shortly before her death September 23, on the 119-acre Lyon estate near Rockville.

Mrs. Lyon left an estimated $400,000 in cash and securities and approximately $137,000 in real estate. The Washington Loan & Trust Co. was named as trustee and executor.

Through Attorneys Louis B. Arnold and Albert M. Bouic, Dr. Lyon contends that he is entitled to a one-third share in the estate and that he is being deprived of this share by the trust. He contends that Mrs. Lyon was in a "weakened physical and mental condition," and was exposed to "various influences" and was persuaded frequently to "do things that did not represent her real intent."

Dr. Lyon further charges that the Washington Loan & Trust Co., of which he formerly was a director, had misrepresented to his wife that he had mismanaged her affairs.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 29 (AP).—All salaried employes of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad are getting pay increases, the main offices reported today.

The superintendent of the road's Cumberland (Md.) division, Chester T. The increase, system-wide, would be effective in the pay of January 12 and would be retroactive to October 1, Williams said.

Greater benefits for more people is what the Nation's stepped-up Social Security program is aiming for.

On January 1, three out of every four people working for a living in America—45 million persons—will be eligible to join in the plan.

Last summer, Congress upped the Social Security benefits an average of 77.5 percent, starting in September. This applies to the two types of benefits paid by Social Security:

1. Monthly retirement payments to insured persons and their families.

2. Monthly and lump sum death benefits to families of insured persons.

The new law makes the minimum monthly check $20 for a person retiring at 65—double the previous minimum—and sets the maximum for a retired man with a family at $150—it was $85 before.

Those who would like to make an approximation of benefits they will be in line for, may work it out on the adjoining table.

Congress also made it easier for many to become eligible for payments. Only 18 months of payments will be required when a worker reaches 65 or dies before June 1954 in order to receive most benefits.

Under the old law, it would have required 105 months of payments, or half the number of months from the time Social Security began — January 1937 — until the retirement in June 1954, to obtain most benefits.

After June, 1954, a worker at 65 (or his family, in case of his death at any age), may be eligible for all types of benefits if he worked at least 18 months and also as long as one of the following periods:

1. Half the time after 1950, or
2. Half the time after he became 21, or
3. Ten years in all, in jobs or self-employed work covered by Social Security.

In addition, some—but not all—benefits are available to relatives of insured persons if the wage-earner was under Social Security for at least 18 of the most recent 39 months.

The 1950 amendments to the Social Security Act were particularly liberal for men who were in the armed forces during World War II. A wage credit of $160 is awarded for each month of active service, and this will be used in determing the amount of insurance payments in these cases:

To the veteran and his family when he retires; to the family of a serviceman or woman now deceased, or to the family of a veteran if he should die. The wage credits will also help in qualifying for any type payment.

These credits apply to the period served between September 16, 1940 and July 24, 1947, if the discharge was not dishonorable.

The computation of exactly how much in benefits will be coming your way is complex. The best solution is to consult field officers of the Social Security Administration. This is where they are located:

District—1400 Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Maryland—Baltimore, Postoffice Building, and 5227 York rd. Cumberland, Postoffice Building. Hagerstown, 74 West Washington st. Salisbury, Postoffice Building.

Virginia—Alexandria, 815 King st.. Bristol, 601 State st. Covington, 123 North Maple ave. Danville, Postoffice Building. Lynchburg, Postoffice Building. Newport News, 84 30th st. Norfolk, 110 West Charlotte st. Petersburg, 34 Franklin St. Richmond, 75 East Main st. Roanoke, Federal Building. Staunton, 12 South Market st., Winchester, 139 North Loudon st.

Remember, that no benefits are paid automatically. You must apply, and the above offices are the place to do this. The times to act are:

1. When you become 65.
2. In case of your death, your family should call.

If you work for more than one employer and have had taxes deducted for more than $3000 income up to this year, or $3600 starting in 1951, you can file a claim for a refund with the collector of Internal Revenue (at Baltimore for D. C. and Maryland residents, or at Richmond for Virginians). Such claims must be filed within two years of the year in which the taxes were withheld.

Income Tax Credits

The new law permits persons to take the refunds in the form of credit against income tax.

Your Social Security card is like a life insurance policy. Guard it well and if it is lost, apply for a duplicate—not a new number. A new number would confuse your account.

Applications for the card are available at all postoffices or at the Social Security offices at 1400 Pennsylvania ave. (for D. C. and Maryland residents) or 815 King st., Alexandria.

SUNDAY—How the new Social Security program, which starts Monday, affects workers in general.

Effects of Security Act On Federal Workers

Tables comparing the monthly benefits for Federal employes under Social Security with the Civil Service retirement system payments, will appear Sunday in the Federal Diary, conducted by Jerry Klutz.

About 250,000 Federal employes will be covered by Social Security on January 1, the first time the system has been extended to Government service.

Social Security Benefit Table

To obtain a rough approximation of what your benefits would be under Social Security if you died or retired now, use the table below. (The benefits will remain about the same if you keep on working and earning at your present rate and retire or die later.)

The one factor necessary to use the table is the average monthly wage. Here is how you determine it:

1. Add up how much you have earned in all since January, 1937, when Social Security started. Do not count more than $3000 in any year—that has been the limit for Social Security purposes.

2. Divide the total earned by 168—the number of months since Social Security began—and the result will be your average monthly wage.

[If your twenty-first birthday came after January, 1937, you may use the number of months between your twenty-second birthday and January 1, 1951, in computing your average monthly wage.]

U. S. Communists Denounce Effects Of Preparedness

NEW YORK, Dec. 29 (U.P.)—The Communist Party of America today went into the second day of its fifteenth national convention with denunciations of the effect of prepardness measures on the country and the rights of the people.

John Williamson, labor secretary, said President Truman's proclamation of a state of emergency was designed to break unions and would result in longer working hours with no overtime pay, unprecedented speedups and wage cuts. He predicted this will increase the exasperation of workers and make them work harder to defend their rights.

Henry Winston, organizational secretary, said the purpose of the trial at which he and 10 other Communists were convicted of conspiring to advocate the forceful overthrow of the Government was to make it a crime for people to organize for peace.

Banjamin Davis, member of the national committee, said the "Negro liberation move" is a move for peace and urged determined and uncompromising support for it.

Witness Tells Of Delivering Cash to Sheriff

TAMPA, Fla., Dec. 29 (AP).—Sheriff Hugh Culbreath tonight put a batch of his personal financial records in the hands of a United States Senate committee that had just heard testimony linking him with money deals with reputed gambling figures.

The Hillsborough County sheriff was asked no questions, but was told to turn in his financial records and come back tomorrow for examination.

He will likely be called on to answer testimony that he received $1500 from a Bolita (numbers) operator who was later slain in gangster style.

Some explanation probably will be sought, too, about where he stood in purchase of a Pinellas county fish house from a reputed gambling syndicate leader and whether there was anything wrong with buying a piece of property from an associate of gangster Al Capone.

Waiting for the sheriff to show up, the Federal investigators whiled away their time tonight listening to a former Tampa city police vice squad man testify he had been told to go easy on certain favored gambling operators and lost his job for arresting a friend of the chief.

The witness, Air Force Lieut. Charles Marvin, charged a police sergeant had put $90,000 into a gambling operation and had cleared some $250,000 on his job. He said a lieutenant had collected $100 every three months to permit moonshine liquor sellers to operate.

Giglia said he and Velasco supported Culbreath's opponent in the first 1948 Democratic primary despite the sheriff's warning for them to get right.

In the second primary campaign he said Velasco took $500 "out of the pot" for Bolita operations and he (Giglia) took it to the sheriff who received it with the comment "it comes in handy."

A few days after Culbreath was renominated in the second primary, Giglia said, Velasco put $1,000 in an envelope, gave it to him to give to the sheriff. Giglia called it "delivering the rent."

He said he personally handed the envelope to Culbreath and said "Jimmy sent you this."

"He said 'okay'—that's all," Giglia said.

He said he didn't know why Velasco was shot down in December, 1948, but imagined it was because he was getting too popular in politics. "He swung a lot of votes," the witness said.

A deal linking Sheriff Culbreath and the reputed head of a gambling syndicate in a $19,000 fish house purchase also was outlined for the committee.

Senator Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.) heard the testimony as a subcommittee of one after reading an opening statement that Tampa criminals are key figures in the organized narcotic trade and the city is believed to be a principal receiving point for smuggled dope.

N. W. Caton, a boat engineer, testified he and Sheriff Culbreath negotiated four years ago for purchase of beach property where they were to be partners in a fish business.

The sheriff was to put up the purchase money, he said, but when the time came to close the deal Salvatore (Red) Italiano showed up and took title to the land at Pass-A-Grille in the name of his wife distributing company.

Caton said Italiano, twice named in court here as head of the local gambling syndicate, told him he was acting for Sheriff Culbreath.

Accardo, Long Sought, To Testify Here Jan. 5

CHICAGO, Dec. 29 (AP).—A Senate Crime Committee's long search for Tony Accardo, reputed head of a national crime syndicate, ended today.

Accardo, who has been sought by committee investigators throughout the United States and Mexico for months, appeared voluntarily at the United States marshal's office and was served with a subpena calling for his appearance before the crime investigating body.

Accardo was named by Senator Estes Kefauver, committee chairman, as a national figure of the underworld. He was accompanied by his attorney, George Callaghan.

In Washington, Rudolph Halley, chief counsel for the Kefauver committee, said Accardo would testify at an open hearing there next Friday, January 5.

Halley said Accardo was regarded as "one of the very important witnesses" on interstate big time gambling.

Halley said the committee rereived testimony at hearings in Chicago and Miami, Fla., that Accardo "had considerable income in 1949 from one of the largest policy wheels (numbers gambling) in Chicago."

S. & G. has been identified as a large bookmaking syndicate.

County School Building Bill Is 7½ Million

The Prince Georges County Board of Education yesterday presented the county commissioners with a $7,500,000 construction program for county schools during the next two years.

The list contained 16 projects for which County Superintendent of Schools G. Gardner Shugart $4,500,000 was needed so work could be started immediately. It also included 13 other projects due to be finished by 1952.

The plan was presented at a board meeting to which the commissioners and the county delegation to the State Legislature were invited in order to acquaint them with the financial needs of the school board.

The $7,500,000 is needed for essential school construction and the buying of new school sites, Shugart said, and does not take into consideration such things as raising teachers' salaries. If teachers' salaries were raised only $100 a year, Shugart said, it would take an additional $175,000. "And I don't think $100 a year will be enough."

The construction program, which was taken under advisement by the commissioners, included 176 new classrooms at 25 different schools and 13 sites for new schools totaling 135 acres.

Also included were 13 multi-purpose rooms, four auditoriums, two kitchens and two gymnasiums.

Superintendent Shugart explained that the State Legislature has already authorized a nine million dollar bond issue for the county so that no legislative action would be needed to float a bond issue for the needed money.

"We request you to provide as much of this program as you possibly can as soon as you possibly can," Dr. Shugart said.

Gaithersburg Boy Wounded On Hood Ride

Astride the hood of a two-ton truck traveling south from Sunchon, Korea, proved a dangerous spot November 30 for a former Gaithersburg, Md., youth.

Sergt. William White, 20, and about 30 men of his heavy-armored division were blasted by machine gun and "burp" fire of a full regiment of Chinese Communists. The enemy swarmed on each side of a mountainous northern road, attempting to block the evacuation movements of Second Division units.

A bullet plowed into the left thigh of Sergeant White, smashing a bone. Many of the men riding in the back of the truck were killed.

Lying in his hospital bed at Walter Reed Hospital yesterday, Sergeant White smiled from behind an elaborate network of pulley ropes and steel rods, which suspended his injured leg.

"I saw all I want of Korea and then some," he said. His face lit up as he described his pleasant family reunion on December 25. He couldn't go home for Christmas, so his mother, Mrs. Mary E. White, now living in Frederick, Md., his sister and brother brought Christmas to him.

From August to November, Sergeant White had tramped from Pusan in the south to the Chosan Reservoir area in the freezing north. He was in the push from Seoul past the thirty-eighth parallel.

Sergeant White enlisted on January 10, 1949, and left for overseas from Fort Lewis, Wash., early in August.

He attended Gaithersburg schools, and worked for a cigarette-vending machine company in Frederick before enlisting.

After an air ride from Korea, and a 10-day stopover at the station hospital in Kelly Field, Tex., he arrived at Walter Reed on December 19.

Atomic Raid Possibility Studied in Prince Georges

A plan to maintain communications in Prince Georges County if the telephone system should be knocked out by an atomic attack was offered to the county board of commissioners yesterday at their meeting in Upper Marlboro.

The proposal, as outlined by A. L. McIntosh, member of the county civil defense board and the Capital Suburban Radio Club, would utilize existing fire and police radios plus the services and equipment of the county's 250 "ham" radio operators.

Mobile and stationary communication centers with radio receivers and transmiters would take the place of telephone switchboards in relaying emergency calls from defense headquarters to the Police and Fire departments. Emergency power supplies would allow amateur operators to provide "vital" communication links between communities and central headquarters.

McIntosh, a Federal Communications Commission official, estimated $17,647 would buy the necessary equipment to integrate existing radio facilities in the area and another $6950 would include public utilities, the military and vital government departments.

Lobby Probers Turn Spotlight On Business-Backed Group

Democratic members of the House Lobby Investigating Committee said yesterday the "finances and techniques" of the American Enterprise Association "should be fully disclosed under the Lobbying Act."

The committee filed a report through Chairman Buchanan (D., Pa.). Republican members did not sign it. The report said the association, with headquarters in New York City, has received substantial support from large business groups, including General Motors and Bethlehem Steel, and "only the viewpoint of big business is presented."

The Democrats intimated the association has cooperated closely with a congressional coalition of Republicans and southern Democrats who have blocked much of President Truman's legislative program. They said the association has not registered under the Lobbying Act.

"We repeat our conviction," the Democrats said, that the association "can render a useful service by its intelligent presentation of industry's point of view. This point of view is both too important and too honorable, however, to be hidden behind a self-serving facade of objectivity to which no tests of interest can presently be applied."

Sinclair Weeks was listed as president of the association and identified as Republican national committeeman from Massachusetts and finance committee chairman of the Republican National Committee.

4-Star Rank Is Asked For Late Gen. Walker

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday asked Congress to promote the late Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker posthumously to the rank of four-star general.

General Walker, who was commanding the Eighth Army in Korea, was killed December 23 in a jeep accident near the fighting front. He was on his way to present the Distinquished Unit Citation to the Twenty-fourth Infantry Division and the British Commonwealth Twenty-seventh Brigade when his jeep collided with a South Korean weapons carrier.

The President requested his posthumous promotion, to date from December 20, in identical letters to Vice President Alben W. Barkley and Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.). He mentioned General Walker's "outstanding accomplishments" as Eighth Army commander and said these "fully entitle him to this recognition."

"Brilliant Commander"

In Korea, Mr. Truman wrote, General Walker "proved himself to be a brilliant military commander and his indomitable courage was an inspiration to all the troops under his command."

Only by extraordinary exertion on the part of Congress could Mr. Truman's request be complied with in time for General Walker to be buried as a full general Tuesday. The House meets Monday, but the Senate will not convene until noon Tuesday, only two hours before services are scheduled to begin at Arlington Cemetery.

A MATS airplane bearing the dead commander's body is scheduled to arrive at National Airport tonight. Before landing here it will stop at Philadelphia, where Mrs. Walker, their son, Capt. Sam Walker, and the captain's wife and baby son, will leave the airplane. They will come to Washington later.

To Meet Body

General Walker's body, accompanied by Master Sergt. Walter Reynolds, will be met at National Airport by Maj. Gen. Thomas W. Herren, commanding the Military District of Washington, a party of Defense Department officials and a guard of honor from the Third Infantry Regiment.

The body wil then be taken to a vault at Arlington, where it will rest until funeral services in the Fort Myer side-chapel at 2 p. m. Tuesday.

From the chapel, the funeral procession will move to Section 34 of the cemetery at Grant and Pershing aves., where General Walker will be buried near Gen. John J. Pershing, under whom he served as a machine-gun battalion commander 32 years ago.

Services in the chapel and at the graveside will be conducted by the Rev. John B. Walthour, dean of the Episcopal Cathedral, Atlanta, Ga. Chaplain at West Point from 1943 to 1947, Dean Walthour was especially requested by the family.

Honorary Pallbearers

Honorary pallbearers, in addition to Sergeant Reynolds, will include Gen. George C. Marshall, Secretary of Defense; Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Supreme Commander, Allied Powers in Europe; Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; Gen. Jacob L. Devers, Vice Admiral George Murray, Lieut. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, Lieut. Gen. James Van Fleet, commanding the Second Army, Fort Meade, Md.; Lieut. Gen. Troy H. Middleton, Lieut. Gen. E. H. Brooks, Lieut. Gen. Alfred Gruenther, Maj. Gen. Hanson E. Ely, Maj. Gen. St. Clair Streett.

Also, Maj. Gen. Charles L. Bolte, Maj. Gen. Earl Partridge, Maj. Gen. John Leonard, Maj. Gen. Joseph M. Swing, Maj. Gen. Lewis Craig, Maj. Gen. Davenport Johnson, Maj. Gen. Karl Truesdell, Maj. Gen. Russell P. Hartle, Maj. Gen. J. S. Wood, Maj. Gen. Orlando Ward, Maj. Gen. S. P. Spalding, Brig. Gen. Harvey C. Allen, Brig. Gen. W. H. Hobson, Brig. Gen. L. S. Gerow, Col. Parker Hitt, Col. Gilbert Allen, Col. W. B. Leitch.

In conformity with tradition at funerals of general officers, a caparisoned horse, with boots reversed in the stirrups, will follow behind the caisson bearing General Walker's body from the chapel to the grave. The procession will be led by the Army Band and minute guns will be fired during the procession.

General Walker was born at Belton, Tex., December 3, 1889, and was graduated from West Point in 1912. As an infantry officer he served with the Vera Cruz expedition in 1914 and on patrol along the uneasy Mexican border upon his return. While a major commanding the Thirteenth Machine Gun Battalion in the A.E.F., he was decorated twice with the Silver Sttar.

Between World Wars I and II, General Walker served in the United States and China, and in 1944, promoted to major general, took the Twentieth Corps to the European Theater. There he spearheaded Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army in its sweep scross France and won the Distinguished Service Cross for gallantry at the Melun bridgehead on the Seine. He also was awarded a second Oak Leaf Cluster to his World War I Silver Star.

When he was promoted to lieutenant general April 27, 1945, Patton presented him with three gold stars, which he in turn had inherited from General Eisenhower. General Walker was assigned to command the Eighth Army July 20, 1948, and took it to Korea in July, 1950.

To Be Officers

Draft-Due Md. Doctors Volunteer

Maryland's draft-liable doctors aren't waiting to be drafted.

All of the Free State's approximately 45 dentists, and veterinarians in priority one who have passed the physical qualifications test have volunteered for a reserve commission in the Army rather than await induction via the draft.

Disclosure of Maryland's "amazing" record in the special doctor draft was made yesterday by a spokesman for the Second Army, which covers an eight-State area including Maryland, the District, and Virginia.

For the Second Army area as a whole, only half of the physically able doctors facing an eventual draft call have signified their willingness to accept an Army reserve commission.

To date, 276 priority one doctors have volunteered for commissions in the Second Army area, and 276 others have indicated a preference to await the draft. Priority one includes those physicians, dentists, and veterinarians who were deferred during World War II to complete their education or training, and who later served less than 90 days in the armed forces.

Second Army figures for the District show that seven qualified physicians have thus far refused commissions; six have accepted; and three are considering whether to accept the proferred commissions. Six dentists here have qualified, and of them, three have already accepted reserve commissions.

Quadruple Amputee Tries Double Hook

Pfc. Robert L. Smith, the first reported quadruple amputee of the Korean war, spent yesterday getting accustomed to a newly fitted double hook for his right hand.

His mother, Mrs. Clara Smith of Middleburg, Pa., was at his bedside in Walter Reed Hospital.

After the excitement of seeing his mother on Thursday and talking to reporters, the dark-haired soldier was "feeling fine and rested" yesterday after a good night's sleep, hospital officials said.

The young victim of frostbite gingerly tested the two-pronged hook, operated by a strap moving from the left shoulder, as she looked on. When he moved his shoulder forward, the hook opened; back, it closed.

When the left arm heals, another "claw" will be secured, and finally, mechanical hands, doctors said.

Phone calls offering help and comfort were relayed to ward 33.

Other offers of room and board and gifts of clothing were received at the Red Cross Center in the hospital.

One message from a world-wide organization of 2000 amputees read: "It is not what you have lost but what you have left that counts.

"By using artificial appliances now available," the letter continued, "we found that we could hold our own on the ball diamond, bowling alleys or the tennis courts." Pictures of amputees performing weight lifting and taking part in other forms of sports, were enclosed in the letter to Smith.

Walter Morgan, commander of the District of Columbia Department of the American Legion, indicated yesterday that checks were in the mail for the newly established Robert L. Smith Fund.

Plea for Release Of Vogeler Gets Curt Treatment

VIENNA, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—The Hungarian Legation today sent Mrs. Lucille Vogeler a curt note saying it could not deliver her letter to Hungarian Premier Matyas Rakosi, pleading for her American husband's release from a Budapest jail.

Robert A. Vogeler, assistant vice president and eastern European manager for International Telephone and Telegraph, was sentenced by a Hungarian court a year ago to 15 years imprisonment for alleged espionage.

Last week Mrs. Vogeler wrote Rakosi asking the Communist leader to make 1951 a "wonderful year" by releasing her husband. She inclosed a brief note for him also. Both were returned through the Austrian mails today, badly crumpled.

"They must have carried their lunch in it," Mrs. Vogeler said bitterly.

Damage to Bridge Held Exaggerated

BALTIMORE, Dec. 29 (AP).—Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., caused to the Chesapeake Bay Bridge by the late November had word today that damage storm can be repaired for $184,000, not the million dollars previously estimated.

The new estimate came from a New York engineering firm which surveyed the span after the storm. Its report emphasized that damage to the substructure was caused by "forces produced by unusually severe storms acting on uncompleted parts of the work." It added, "we believe little or no structural damage would have occurred had the substructure and superstructure been completed at the time of the storm."

East Germans Send New Bid For 'Unity'

BERLIN (Saturday), Dec. 30 (NYHT).—The East German government's proposal for negotiations with West Germany to restore German unity was repeated today in a letter from Johannes Dieckmann, president of the East German People's Chamber, to Hermann Ehlers, president of the West German Bundestag.

This was the latest step in an intensive and so far partially successful Communist campaign to put pressure on the West German government by posing as champions of German unity.

Dieckemann pointed out that a month has gone by since a similar letter was sent to West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer by East German Prime Minister Otto Grotewohl and that no answer has been forthcoming from Adenauer.

The American sector Berlin radio station RIAS last night quoted Adenauer as saying he would answer the Grotewohl letter after New Year's Day. The federal government is collecting documents on the subject and is expected to issue a white paper.

It is known that the Bonn cabinet has been debating seriously the question of whether and how to answer Grotewohl even though Adenauer's first reaction was that he need not answer the letter because it was a Communist trick.

Dieckmann warned that "the life of our Nation" was endangered by the division of the German people which was "a natural unity by God's will and man's right."

Socialist Leader Kurt Schumacher warned yesterday in an article that Grotewohl's letter was "thought up and written in Moscow" and said that for the Russians a united Germany meant a Soviet Germany. He pointed to the recently voted East German "peace law" under which West Germans could get high sentences for "war propaganda" as an example of the "inimicable nerve" with which the East German leaders were trying to intimidate the West Germans they were inviting to negotiate with them.

The Berlin newsparer Der Kurier, which is close to Dr. Adenauer's party, the Christian Democratic Union, took issue with Schumacher who, it said, was not burdened with "political responsibility." Der Kurier suggested that the Bonn government might do well to negotiate with the East Germans since it could "always say no if it were faced with unacceptable demands."

Scotland Yard Finds Old Safe, No Scone Stone

LONDON, Dec. 29 (AP).—Scotland Yard sleuths dredged a big lump of concrete, a rusty old safe and an iron chair from a Hyde Park lake today, but failed to come up with the priceless coronation stone they sought.

The persevering police said they would keep on working in the lake, called the Serpentine, until they were sure the Stone of Scone, which old king Edward I filched from the Scots back in the 13th Century, wasn't there. The stone was stolen from Westminster Abbey Christmas Day.

The detectives' hope that it might be in the lake was kept alive by sighting of a mysterious object on the slimy bottom late today.

Looking through a glass-bottomed barrel, they confirmed that the object was the right size and shape. Darkness interrupted their attempts to raise it. They will resume Saturday morning.

750,000 Tons Of U. S. Arms Sent to Allies

By the United Press

More than 725,000 tons of United States arms have been shipped to anti-Communist nations since last March and defense officials hope to speed up the military aid program next year, it was disclosed yesterday.

The equipment already sent to alies in Europe and Asia includes more than 1600 tanks, 750 heavy artillery guns, 600 planes, 50 naval vessels and 6000 vehicles.

The figures do not include an undisclosed number of aircraft and naval vessels which crossed the oceans under their own power.

The lion's share—478,000 tons—went to western European members of the Atlantic Pact. Another 187,000 tons were shipped to the Mediterranean for Greece, Turkey and Iran, and 60,000 tons went to the Far East, for the Philippines, Indo-China, Malaya, Indonesia, Burma and Formosa.

All of the shipments were made since March, when the military defense assistance program was approved by Congress. More than six billion dollars has since been voted for the purpose.

Maj. Gen. Stanley L. Scott, new director of the Defense Department's military assistance office, said the shipments are just a start on what is needed to equip the unified western European defense force being raised under the command of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

"The strength of those armies, and their state of readiness, will depend to a great degree in the initial stages on the ability of American industry to keep the supplies flowing to Europe at an ever-increasing tempo," he said.

Most From War Stocks

Most of the arms shipped so far have come from World War II reserve stocks. But future shipments will increasingly lean on the current output of American defense industry.

The aircraft shipped abroad include some B-29 bombers and a large number of fighter planes. Naval vessels were mainly landing craft, but included some submarines and destroyers.

In addition to heavy weapons, the tonnage represents thousands of rifles, pistols and mortars, millions of rounds of ammunition, and large quantities of electronics equipment and spare parts.

The Defense Department also is training about 13,000 foreign military officers and enlisted specialists in the use of the American equipment.

British Areas Unguarded Since Navy Cut

LONDON, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—Lloyds' authoritative Shipping Gazette reported today that cutbacks in the British navy have left vast areas under British control virtually without seapower.

Lloyds' survey showed that Britain's submarine strength was lower than before the war, that its cruiser fleet was only two fifths as strong and other class vessels proportionately as weak.

It said only "lip service" had been paid to naval rearmament during the year despite the tense international situation and the lesson learned in Korea of the importance of seapower.

The Admiralty announced early in August that 89 vessels of the reserve fleet, mainly small units, would be refitted in private shipyards to meet the new July 26 defense program.

But Lloyds said there was not enough room or manpower available in the royal dockyards to complete work already begun.

It said the shortage of naval strength was illustrated by the fact that when the cruiser Glasgow and the frigate Snipe returned to Britain in October "the American and West Indies squadron was temporarily reduced to only one small frigate."

No major warship ordered since the war has been laid down so far, Lloyds said, and only a few long-delayed vessels have been put afloat.

Under the July 26 defense program, 5 destroyers, 2 frigates, 16 fleet minesweepers, 12 motor minesweepers, landing craft and other auxiliary vessels were to be put back in commission.

India to End State Of War With Germany

BERLIN, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—India announced today it would terminate its state of war with Germany on January 1, the first nation that fought Nazi Germany to do so.

The Indian government stated its intentions in a note delivered to the Allied Liaison and Protocol Section of the Four-Power Allied Control Authority in Berlin.

India said it would terminate the state of war as of January 1 and was "taking the necessary action in this regard."

Yugoslavian Grant Signed

President Truman yesterday signed legislation providing an additional 38 million dollars in food aid for drought-stricken Yugoslavia.

The fund raises to approximately 69 million dollars the amount of American assistance to the Balkan nation, which is Communist-ruled but is at odds with Russia.

Mr. Truman had asked Congress for the money to avert a famine as a result of a Yugoslav crop failure. He also said it was needed "to help preserve the independence of a nation which is defying the savage threats of Soviet imperialists."

Food shipments to Yugoslavia by "relay"—flour from Italy and Germany—are already well under way.

In the interest of speed, the Economic Cooperation Administration arranged to have flour already available in Europe sent directly. Later, the ECA will make up, in shipments of wheat to the two countries.

French Beat Back Rebel Drive Within 10 Miles of Hanoi

SAIGON, Indo-China, Dec. 29 (AP).—Several Viet Minh battalions struck the French defense arc north of Hanoi on a 25-mile front today and drove within 10 miles of that provincial capital. Then they yielded their guns and fled under counterattack by French mobile reserves and warplanes.

A French communique declared heavy casualties weer inflicted on the Communist-led rebels but admitted "significant' losses" among the defenders.

The Frencn posts between Duy and Songcau Rivers bore the brunt of the assault, which began in the night. Several were surrounded.

Before the Viet Minh troops were driven back, they were smashing against the defenses at Yenphu, only 10 miles from Hanoi. But the commitment of the French reserves and planes changed the picture. Fractured French positions were restored.

After four days of shifting attacks, it still was not apparent whether the rebels are ready to start their big push in north Indo-China. The rebels' clandestine radio last night referred to the operations as only "a fall campaign" and said the general offensive is yet to come.

The French-chartered passenger ship Argentina, under Panama registry, is scheduled to sail for Marseille Saturday from the French-held seaport of Haiphong, 65 miles east of Hanoi, with 1000 French women and children from north Indo-China. It is estimated 5000 more will leave in January under an evacuation order published December 4.

The United States Minister to Indo-China, Donald R. Heath, flew today from Saigon to Luang Prabang, the capital of Laos, and presented his credentials to King Sisavang Vong.

Ridgway Predicts Complete Victory

In U. N. Complaint

Red Group Lists Allied 'Atrocities'

LONDON, Dec. 29 (AP). — The Moscow Radio said today that a Red-suported investigating commission had complained to the United Nations that Americans and South Koreans had committed atrocities in Pyongyang, former North Korean capital.

The broadcast quoted what it called "Communique No. 1" of the "Commission of the United Democratic Patriotic Front for Investigating and Assessing Losses Caused by American Aggressors and the Syngman Rhee Clique." Makeup of the commission was not indicated.

The commission's report was sent to the U. N. Security Council president and to the U. N. secretary-general, the broadcast said.

The alleged atrocities were supposed to have occurred during the six-week occupation of Pyongyang by U. N. forces. The report charged that both United States and South Korean forces had "conducted themselves like medieval barbarians in a vanquished land . . . committed mass murders of the civilian population, violated and beaten up women, plundered the people's wealth, and destroyed industrial equipment, enterprises, urban economy, cultural instructions and dwelling houses."

The "communique" claimed that 15,000 Pyongyang residents had been "murdered" during the occupation. It said that "Americans and Syngman Rheeites" had shot 2000 persons in the courtyard of Pyongyang prison, blown up a crowded bridge, killed prisoners of war, and "raped a large number of women and girls."

PUSAN, Korea, Dec. 29 (U.P.)—Lieut. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, new commander of the Eighth Army, predicted today that the United Nations mission in Korea would be "entirely successful."

Ridgway, on a flying trip to this principal supply port, said there were "some things" still critically needed, but added:

"I just came from Washington and I know everything required is going to be furnished as speedily as possible."

Asked if he were going to liberate and unify all Korea, Ridgway said that "the United Nations mission here ultimately will be entirely successful."

"I have a great Army," he added. "The teamwork among the Army, Navy and Air Force is nothing short of perfect. I have complete confidence in this team."

Earlier Ridgway returned to his headquarters from a front-line inspection tour and expressed "complete confidence" in the ability of his command to cope with the Chinese Communists.

Ridgway, a veteran of paratroop warfare in Europe, received correspondents for the first time since assuming the post held by Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker who was killed in a jeep accident last Saturday. Ridgway arrived three days ago.

Still dressed in the battle gear he wore on his visit to the front areas, Ridgway said he had been "relieved of any anxiety I might have had of any amphibious envelopment on my left flank".

He said he found both the men of his command and the South Korean army "doing a mighty good job in pretty rugged country in which temperatures now are around 12 degrees."

"I would like to express complete confidence in the ultimate success of this magnificent team of which I command but a part—the Eighth Army," he said

Ridgway called upon correspondents to "cooperate" with him by not disclosing any operations plans or speculating on them. He also asked that no further mention be made of the senior commanders or their units.

ting tools, and to retain the hardness of steel under great heat when it is used for magnets, gun barrel linings, jet engines and gas turbines.

Other Diverse Uses

It is also used in many chemicals, and is of particular importance in aiding the fast drying of paint and printing ink.

More than 95 percent of the supply comes from the Belgian Congo.

[An NPA official, explaining the cobalt order to reporters, was asked what effect the order would have on color television, the Associated Press said. He commented that he thought perhaps color television would have to go in "mothballs," but he quickly added that this was not due to the cobalt order, but to other factors. "Cobalt has nothing to do with it," he said. An NPA press officer then told the reporters that the NPA was not making any comment on color television at all.]

Besides requiring cobalt to be allocated by the Government, NPA forbade certain uses of the metal beginning February 1, particularly in paint-making, and ordered every person holding more than 100 pounds of the substance to report his inventory.

Meanwhile in New York, Frank Stanton, president of the Columbia Broadcasting System, telegraphed NPA Administrator Harrison urging that color television "be given an opportunity to share materials with standard black and white television and other consumer products."

The Federal Communications Commission has approved the color television developed by CBS as the national standard, but commercial color telecasting has been held up by litigation brought by the Radio Corp. of America, developer of a rival system, and other firms. A group of television wholesalers asked the NPA a few days ago to forbid the use of scarce materials for color television.

"We cannot help but feel that the reported request to the NPA is one more effort to block color television, in addition to those made before the FCC and the courts which have already failed," said Stanton.

The fast changing defense mobilization picture showed these other developments yesterday.

1. The Economic Stabilization Agency, which governs price and wage ceilings, announced that it will set up 13 regional offices "to handle price and wage problems and appeals" for each area. The action is in line with expected broadened use of the price-wage control authority.

2. The Federal Reserve Board forecast in its monthly bulletin "extensive shifts in the use of manpower, materials and plant capacity," and reductions in output of civilian commodities. The board urged industry to hasten its switchover to defense production.

3. Three Government - owned magnesium plants, idle since World War II, will be reopened soon to enlarge the Nation's output of the vital light metal.

The plants, at Painesville, Ohio, Canaan, Conn., and Wingdale, N. Y., will produce an estimated 112,000,000 pounds of magnesium in the next two years. Magnesium is used in aircraft construction and for other purposes requiring a very light metal.

Britain Considers Training Reserves

Dulles Attacks Hoover Views

need to "expose errors" and exert "constructive pressures." But he insisted that the five-year record was one "of which we can be proud."

Looking to the future, Dulles said the free world must search for "effective deterrents to Russian armed aggression." He said the West had the advantage in its economic strength and in "grave internal weaknesses" of the Soviet system. He acknowledged that Russia had the strategic advantage of interior lines, and that the West would "have strength nowhere and bankruptcy everywhere" if it tried to build static defenses all around the Soviet frontier.

"That, however, does not mean," he said, "that we should abandon the whole idea of collective security and build our own defense area with the help of such other countries as we might pick because of their capacity to be useful to us.

"The whole world can be confident that the United States will not at a moment of supreme danger shed allies who are endangered and to whom we are bound by solemn treaty, by common heritage and by past fellowship in war and peace.

"I do not interpret anyone as urging this. Any nation doing that would be in no position thereafter to do much picking and choosing for its own account.

"Fortunately it is not necessary to spread our strength all around the world in futile attempts to create everywhere a static defense, nor need we crawl back into our own hole in the vain hope of defending ourselves against all the rest of the world.

"Around the rim of the captive world the free world can create enough economic and political vigor, enough military strength and enough will to resist so that these areas cannot be cheaply conquered by subversive methods, by trumped up 'civil wars' or even by satellite attacks."

The right course for the United States, he said, was to do "much more" to strengthen its strategic air force, its stock of weapons, its naval power and its potential strength on the ground.

"The arsenal of retaliation should include all forms of counterattack with maximum flexibility, mobility and the possibility of surprise," he said. "The places of assembly should be chosen, not as places to defend, but as places suitable for destroying the forces of aggression.

"The United Nations, if it shows that it has the requisite moral courage, should be given the right to determine the fact of aggression so as to insure the Charter goal of armed forces not being used save in the common interest. In such ways the idea of collective security can be given sensible and effective content."

U. N. Troops Forced Back positions began in that area a week ago, field reports said.

In the west, U. N. forces were arrayed south of the ice-jammed Imjin River. The appearance of enemy patrols across the river from Munsan was reported in General MacArthur's headquarters summary. Munsan is 25 miles northwest of Seoul.

A corps spokesman in the United States Eighth Army told Correspondent Boyle that Thursday's attack in the east central sector was aimed at Chunchon. He said, "The situation is confused but there is now a dip in our line," extending four or five miles below the thirty-eighth parallel in limited sector.

Headquarters in Tokyo did not say this was the expected major attack, but the enemy was believed to be striking in force up to regimental strength.

United Nations forces moving north failed to reach the thirty-eighth parallel in the extreme eastern section of the front before the invaders had crossed into South Korea.

On December 21, advance units of both parties tangled in the mountainous area and a week of wild, unreported skirmishes followed.

Eighth Army spokesmen reported Friday that U. N. forces were holding 10 miles south of the parallel along a front of 25 to 35 miles in from the east coast.

AP Correspondent William C. Barnard said at one time the enemy pushed ahead 14,000 yards (nearly eight miles) before Allied reinforcements arrived.

The action had solidified Friday with the Eighth Army's announcement of firmed positions.

It was not explained whether the U. N. troops in the east had moved across the peninsula or had been transported there by ship from the recently abandoned northeast port of Hungnam.

"Our forces have been counter-attacking steadily and the attack can now be said to be contained," a spokesman told Boyle.

Boyle said the attack occurred in rugged mountain country south of Pupyong, 23 miles northeast of Chunchon.

Chunchon was the goal of the enemy in the east. Its railroad and highway lead straight to Seoul, 45 miles southwest.

The attack came while the U. N. forces were still pulling into their defense lines. A corps spokesman said the deepest penetration south of Pupyong was four to five miles.

Red advances in the extreme west were also against light opposition until they reached the Imjin. Across the icy river from Musan Chinese patrols were observed — along with refugees by the thousands.

U. N. forces are no longer permitting refugees from North Korea to cross the river, lest disguised Red troops come too.

The western front along the Imjin River followed the stream's snaky course to Chongjong, south of Yonchon, where General MacArthur has reported two Chinese armies poised to smash south.

Because of this, there was conjecture as to the enemy's purpose in the east.

It was not believed the Reds were trying to turn the Allied right flank but were probing for a possible penetration that would either reach the U. N. rear or act as a diversionary action until the Communist horde massing in the center was ready to drive on Seoul.

A United States staff officer said a North Korean engineering battalion moving bridging equipment toward the line had been engaged north of Seoul and four men and an officer had been captured.

The enemy battalion was brought under fire southwest of Korangpo, which is 28 air miles north and slightly west of Seoul and just south of the thirty-eighth parallel.

The staff officer said the battalion was headed in the direction of the site where the main road from Kaesong to Seoul crosses the Imjin. The Allies have blown all highway bridges in the area. The road from Kaesong, a city now again in enemy hands, was the chief avenue of attack for the North Korean army last June in its capture of Seoul.

Allied listening posts reported hearing hammering and mortar movement from across the river. Artillery fired on the Red area with unobserved results.

United States Superforts soared over Songjin, striking in six successive waves for a period of 23 minutes and pummeling that northeast Korean rail and communications center with 176 tons of bombs.

Two hundred enemy troops were caught in a trench by Fifth Air Force B-26 medium bombers near Korangpo. All were reported killed or wounded. Fighter planes flew 250 close support missions Friday.

Jail Prisoners' $45 Stolen—But It's 'Outside Job'

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Dec. 29 (AP). Sheriff Dorsey J. Schultz declared today the burglary at the Adams County Jail was an "outside job."

Schultz said someone broke into the jail "between Tuesday and Wednesday" through a coal chute and took $45 from an open safe. The money belonged to the jail's 25 prisoners.

The sheriff was out of town Tuesday and Wednesday. It was impossible for any of the prisoners to take the money, Schultz added.

Tydings' report showed a total of $21,823.45 unitemized expenditures for "travel, stationery, subsistence, postage, writing or printing for distributing letters, circulars or postcards, for telegraph and telephone service."

The biggest expenditure in Tydings' itemized list—including most advertising, rent and other office expenses—was a total of about $11,000 in five payments to the Joseph Katz Co. for advertising.

Major contributions listed by Tydings were George and Ethel Garrett, $1000 each; Roger J. Whiteford, $500; Morris Shapiro, $2000; Paul B. Middleman, $500; J. M. Elizalde, $500; W. F. Chinese Long Planned Fight, Rusk Charges

NYHT News Service

The United States declared last night that "there can be no doubt now that the Chinese Communists from the very start had every intention of intervening actively should North Korean forces fail in their mission to seize all of Korea."

The assertion was made by Dean Rusk, Assistant Secretary of State for Far Eastern Affairs, in a speech broadcast throughout the world in many languages through Voice of America facilities. It was the bluntest charge yet made by a high American official of Chinese Red complicity in the plot to invade South Korea June 25. It is known to be based on information received by this Government within the past week.

"The Chinese Communists took part in the preparations for the treacherous North Korean assault long before it was actually launched," Rusk said. "A large portion of the North Korean forces that drove across the thirty-eighth parallel last June had come from China . . . We also know now that considerable Soviet military equipment for the North Korean forces was shipped through Manchuria, with the heaviest shipments, including aircraft, taking place in April and May of this year prior to the aggression."

As all American officials have done consistently, Rusk drew a distinction between the Chinese people, for whom the United States has a long tradition of friendliness, and their Communist rulers who are under the thumb of Soviet Russia. He said:

"We believe that surrender to Chinese Communist terrorization would speedily be followed by further Chinese Communist encroachment, directly or indirectly, on the other nations on its borders."

Lifting of Mexican Canned Meat Ban Is Reported Near

By The Associated Press

The ban on sales of Mexican canned meat in the United States will be lifted today for the first time, a Government source said yesterday.

It was emphasized that this does not mean the lifting of the four-year quarantine on livestock imposed December 18, 1946, when the hoof and mouth epidemic spread through Mexico.

However, one official pointed out that in effect it will give Mexico "the same market" for its meat that it would have if the quarantine were lifted.

The ban on Mexican canned meat is being removed after Mexico agreed to meet United States inspection requirements.

An Agriculture Department Official estimated that Mexico has 20 or more meat canneries. It is believed production for United States markets may amount to about 75 million pounds a year.

The United States in 1949 produced 80 million pounds of canned meat, and about 116 million the preceeding year. Imports from Argentina now run about 100 million pounds annually.

U. S. Should Ship 5th Columns Behind Curtain, Wiley Says

Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.) said yesterday the United States should turn the tables on Russia and start stirring up domestic troubles behind the Iron Curtain.

The ranking Republican member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee issued a statement proposing that this country create a top-level strategy board to find ways of fomenting revolutions, guerilla warfare, fifth column activities, and sabotage of Communist countries.

He pointed out that Russia has been using Communist Parties in democratic countries for just that purpose for many years. Asserting that his plan would help to avert the threat of a world war, Wiley said:

"The more preoccupied the Russians are with their own internal difficulties and disturbances, the less they will feel they could rely on their own and satellite peoples and to that extent war pressure would be eased."

Urging the Nation to drop "panty-waist" diplomacy, Wiley said the Russians have poured "arms, money and sabotage materials" into the effort to foment difficulties in this country and its allied nations.

"The Russians are infinitely more susceptible to this type of trouble-making than we are," he said. He added that Communist China is particularly vulnerable because of the large number of pro-Communist guerilla troops within its borders.

Besides helping to avoid war, Wiley said, such a program would carry out this Nation's avowed goal of helping all people become free.

"If we seriously believe in the principles of freedom that we espouse, it is up to us to help others actually to gain that freedom," he said. "You cannot revolt against a modern type of armed dictator unless you have arms."

M. E. Slindee Retires; Deputy Treasurer

Michael E. Slindee, 69, deputy and acting Treasurer of the United States, was retired yesterday at the close of business after 45 years of service with the Government.

Slindee

After the death of William R. Jullan, in 1949, he served as Treasurer of the United States under a special Presidential commission until the appointment of Mrs. Georgia Neese Clark.

A native of Lawler, Iowa, he was graduated from a business course at Valparaiso University in Indiana. In May of 1905 he was appointed as a clerk in the Office of the Treasurer where he remained except for military duty in World War I when he was a first lieutenant in the Chemical Corps.

Shortly after his appointment to the Treasurer's office, Slindee was assigned to the National Redemption Agency where he progressed to superintendent. Seven years later, in 1936, he was named administrative assistant to the Treasurer.

He was named deputy and acting Treasurer in 1944. Following that he became Treasurer under the Presidential commission.

Charles Stevenson, 66, of 1851 Columbia rd. nw., will retire as deputy commissioner of customs after more than 51 years of Government service.

Stevenson, who heads hte division of appraisement administration, will be given the Treasury Department's Gallatin award for long and distinguished service.

Mrs. Agnes L. Wilcox, 62, of 1829 Wyoming ave. nw., retires from the State Department today, after 25 years with the Foreign Service.

Mrs. Wilcox comes from a family that has spent more than 175 years of continuous service with the Foreign Service. She was born in Bonn, Germany, while her father was consul at Strasbourg.

Frank Letson was retired from the District Government yesterday after 34 years service. He was the special assistant to the District auditor. He was employed by the Baltimore and Ohio Railway until his resignation in 1916. He and his wife live at 7208 Bowdoin st. in College Park, Md.

George C. Billard, 65, of 3260 Van Hazen st. nw., retired yesterday as assistant personnel director of the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

He was a chief clerk in the War Department from 1906 to 1927, when he transferred to the Bureau of Prohibition, as chief of personnel. After the repeal of prohibition, the bureau became to Alcohol Tax Unit of the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

driver for Embassy Dairy, who was coming home from work.

He slipped at the edge of the porch and fell 9 feet into the dirt basement garage driveway below. The boy was rushed by his father to Arlington Hospital where he died shortly after arrival.

He was a second grade student at the Madison Elementary School in Falls Church. The Clatterbucks have two other children, Robert, 10, and Shirley, 14.

Although traffic accidents continued throughout the early morning hours, few were of serious nature, police in the Washington area reported.

Park Police Sergt. Andrew J. Bickford, 47, of 2003 Commonwealth ave., Alexandria, was admitted to Emergency Hospital with undetermined back injuries after his cruiser skidded into another car in the 2300 block of Good Hope rd. se.

In Arlington, a car driven by Emile J. Zimmerman, 53, of 3310 N. 23d st., skidded on the new Spout Run extension of the George Washington Memorial Parkway, ran off the road and partially into Spout Run. He was admitted to George Washington University Hospital with a broken right leg and a broken rib.

Washington police recorded at least 40 accidents between 9 p. m. Thursday and 9 a. m. yesterday. At least another 100 minor accidents were reported which police were to busy to handle.

A number of buses were unable to leave Washington for several hours early yesterday and planes were grounded for a short time at National Airport.

As soon as the freezing rain and sleet started to fall at 9:57 p. m. Thursday, both the District and Capital Transit Co. called in sanding crews. About 45 of them started work at midnight, continuing throughout the night.

Fortunately for area motorists, the freezing rain turned to plain rain shortly before 6 a. m., as the temperature climbed above freezing. By the time rush hour traffic started to roll, most of the roads and streets were travelable and delays were not serious.

Eight persons were hospitalized as the result of falls. They were: Magaret M. Montgomery, 45, of 421 E st. ne.; Melvin F. Ailstock, 30, of Fort Lee, Va.; John Loomis, 76, of 3623 T st. nw.; Mary Cauldon, 40, of 1438 Meridian pl. nw.; Elizabeth Pettigrew, 32, of 1904 Key blvd., Arlington; Miriam Baker, 49, of 1125 Euclid st. nw.; Elsie S. Irvine, 60, of 1906 Sunderland pl. nw., and Mary Cauldron, 40, of 1438 Meridian pl. nw.

Coroner's Jury Clears Three in Auto Deaths

District Coroner Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald presided at the inquests.

Children's Afternoon Of Music

By Paul Hume

Children once more took over Constitution Hall yesterday afternoon, and what a wonderful afternoon it was!

The Washington School of the Ballet and the National Symphony Orchestra presented Hansel and Gretel, to the delight of thousands of youngsters who filled the big hall.

My young neighbor in the row behind me, age 3, "I'll be 4 in January," was Larry Steele, known to family and friends as Tooey.

Tooey kept his eye on everything that went on. When the witch, superbly danced by Mary Day, made known her dire intentions, Tooey kept asking, "Are they going to kill her now? When will she be killed? Have they killed her yet?"

There was nothing bloodthirsty about Tooey; he just had the best interests of Hansel and Gretel at heart. He knew that if Hansel (Marilyn Richtmyer), or Gretel (June Tushin), didn't get that old witch pushed into the oven, she probably would push them in. And Tooey was taking no chances.

There were almost 4000 like Tooey in the hall. Alexandra Polyzoides, who lives in Georgetown, and is about seven, said what lots of the audience were thinking. She said, "I like the witch." What she meant was that the witch was good—just a little too good for comfort. There was a big sigh of relief when she was pushed into her own oven and all the children were safe.

The ballet was staged with scenery of rich imagination. Designed by Jean Riddell, it has all the fantasy and appeal of a Disney film. Against it the young dancers moved in easy patterns that never lagged or lost their point.

The animals in the second act: bats and rats, birds, skunks, fireflies, two deer, rabbits, a big brown bear, a butterfly, and the witch's black cat, filled the stage with creatures children love.

There also were angels to protect the sleeping children. Their scene was beautiful, even if traffic problems arose over the size of the stage. Throughout the ballet, the dancing was of a level of mature achievement that astounded those who had not known what to expect.

Joseph Edward's work as the Father was as fine as the Mother, done by Yvonne Gumbel. Hansel and Gretel carried their long parts with unflagging spirit and style.

Mary Day made the Witch an occasion for excellent work in both classic dancing and pantomime. But it was in the pantomime that the whole company excelled. Every member of the troupe can be proud of his work.

Special mention must go to Margaret Clausen, Christine Mayer, Martha Mitchell, and Sandra Sims, who danced the Moon, Dawn, the Cat, and the Butterfly.

In the musical realm, the entire performance was matched by the playing of the National Symphony under Howard Mitchell. The orchestra played the overture and Prayer from Humperdinck's opera, and movements from symphonies by Haydn.

It was a happy afternoon for everyone who saw and heard.

Postal Triumph

Virtually everyone in the Washington area enjoyed a silent Christmas present from the postoffice, viz, service. Despite the handicap of a rail strike and an embargo which resulted in the piling up of carload after carload of mail during the busiest pre-Christmas period, the postoffice not only overcame the backlog but handled the whole record volume of mail with unusual dispatch. Tallies at the Washington city postoffice show that no fewer than 53 million incoming and seven million outgoing letters and cards went through the local office. The regular crew of 4500 workers plus another 4500 extras handled these letters plus a total of 150,000 sacks of parcels aggregating 1½ million individual packages. An example of the kind of devotion with which postal employes did their job is the fact that several carloads of mail which arrived Christmas Day were all delivered by nightfall. Those of us who are quick to complain when postal service is bad ought to take account of the fact that the service this season was extraordinarily good. Postmaster North and his associates deserve extra good wishes for the New Year.

More Aircraft

Since President Truman made his prediction of a five-fold increase in aircraft production within a year, plane manufacturers have been scratching their heads to see how this can be accomplished. The record of near-miracles in plane production is impressive, but even during the peak of activity in World War II the maximum expansion was about three-fold in any one year. Obviously, in the words of Admiral Dewitt C. Ramsey, president of the Aircraft Industries Association, "such an increase manifestly is not within the capability of the aircraft industry alone." In other words, assuming that the goal is a valid one, there must be a speed-up in governmental cooperation.

Of first importance are adequate priorities on materials for new planes. The bottleneck is not so much in aluminum and other items that go into the planes themselves as in production equipment, machine tools and the like without which expanded manufacture is impossible. Yet, so far, there is no over-all coordination between the National Production Authority and the Munitions Board in this area.

Aircraft concerns are in part assembly plants which depend on many small suppliers. Priorities must cover the whole production process. Moreover, civilian aircraft—which also are essential to defense—are interspersed with military planes on production lines. Yet the Civil Aeronautics Administration and Civil Aeronautics Board have been unable to obtain priorities for such planes, with the result that production lines are impeded. Furthermore, the NPA regulation that aluminum mills need not accept defense orders aggregating more than 25 percent of their production in any one month has resulted in the ridiculous situation that aircraft manufacturers are being quoted May-June delivery on aluminum for defense orders and March delivery on orders without defense ratings.

Secondly, if the goal is to be met, there must be enough orders to put all aircraft factories on an around-the-clock schedule. Several large plants are not now on a triple shift. Prompt order placement is essential if for no other reason than that the production of aircraft usually requires a year or more. Present production figures are not necessarily indicative of orders now on hand, but they furnish some striking contrasts. The current production of about 250 military planes monthly, or about four million airframe pounds, compares with 1380 and 6,299,000, respectively, in May, 1941. Now, because of increases in size and complexity, it takes about four times as many man-hours to build a plane as it did 10 years ago. It goes without saying that the aircraft industry also will need help in training and keeping skilled manpower. This implies an enlightened draft policy and a longer legal work week.

Altogether aircraft production difficulties at this stage in mobilization do not present an encouraging picture. The real problem is whether the current 75 percent civilian—25 percent defense allocations on aluminum are sufficient to cover the needs of an industry which requires most of its aluminum during the first six months of a plane's construction. Plane manufacturers must either get the materials they need or the production goal must be reexamined.

Dual Objective

A growing demand has been noted for a sort of military crusade against international communism. The arguments behind it are not implausible. The Communist regimes of Russia and China and various satellite countries, it is contended, are threatening the free world. There can be no peace so long as they continue both to fasten Communist governments upon other countries through terror and to use their military power to defy the United Nations. Official and unofficial spokesmen increasingly tend, therefore, to set up international communism as an enemy that must be destroyed. It is only another step to the assumption that our military power must be used to protect us from this menace and that, consequently, general war is not only inevitable but also desirable.

The fatal weakness in this trend of thinking is the oft-proved fact that ideas cannot be annihilated by military power and that the attempt to use military power for this purpose is likely to have the opposite effect. "No army," said Victor Hugo, "can withstand the strength of an idea whose time has come," and no military man, from Napoleon to Eisenhower, has disputed it. Christ, Mohammet and Marx have been the real warriors of history. On this point it is of enormous importance for the American people to keep their thinking straight. Force is being used in Korea today not against communism as such, but against a military aggression against a republic that had come into being as a protege of the United Nations. Force will have to be used elsewhere if military aggression is launched at any point where it is feasible for the free world to meet it; this is the purpose of our enormous rearmament program. But it does not follow that all Communists everywhere are our enemies, as indicated by the extensive aid we are giving to Communist Yugoslavia.

Nor are the Russian people our enemies. We have often pleaded that a distinction be drawn between the power-drunk men in the Kremlin and the masses of the Russian people who are compelled to do their bidding. The tragic thing about the loose talk in which some Americans indulge is that it tends to drive the rank and file in Russia to closer support of the Moscow regime as the custodian of Mother Russia. We cannot be too careful about aiming our propaganda and our rearmament efforts at the actual aggressors and conspirators who are endangering the peace.

It is true, of course, that communism itself, with its concept of a class dictatorship and its methods of terrorism, is a menace to freedom and democracy. The one hope of maintaining this earth of ours as a place that is worth living in is conditional upon the triumph of freedom over communism. But this is a struggle that cannot be carried on with guns and bombs. It must be kept in the realm of ideas and of social and economic organization. Nor can it be won by merely hurling epithets, however justified they seem to be, at the "communistic world," as President Truman is apt to do. This newspaper has often stressed the imperative need for free world initiative in developing a body of common ideas. With this need must go a dynamic of belief and an organization of proselytization that would really be competitive.

Now that we are embarked upon a large-scale defense effort, the grave danger is that the two objectives will become confused. That would be tragic for ourselves and for the rest of the free world. For the arms needed to halt aggression can never stop the sweep of communistic ideas among peoples lost in either want or despair. Only the progressive march of free institutions and sound economies can do that. Patriotism requires no less planning, hard work and devotion in the one field than in the other.

Pravda On Japan

There is an ancient and fish-like smell—a particular rather than a general smell—about the last few issues of Pravda. That newspaper keeps insisting that the United States is using Japanese personnel in Korea. That the report is a canard is beside the point. The fact is that prior to any overt move the Soviet government always tries to establish some pretext of legality. This has been familiar practice since the Russians fell on Finland at the end of November in 1939. For days previously little Finland had been accused of violating the Russo-Finnish frontier and threatening Leningrad! In the present instance the Russians are pledged under the Mao-Stalin treaty early this year to come to the assistance of China in case China is at war with Japan or the associates of Japan.

The question arises as to whether Soviet Russia is preparing to fall upon denuded Japan. If she does, then she will be out in the open, and a general war would be inescapable. Is she prepared for that? Nobody knows. A trifle less speculative is the argument offered by some observers that by such an action the Russians might offend Mao's government. There have been two news stories already that relations between Moscow and Peking have been loosened by the chameleon-like Korean adventure. Both appeared this week in the New York Times. One was a story from Tokyo reporting the observations of the U. N. Commission in Korea of evidence of strain between Soviet-trained and Chinese-trained Koreans. The other story is from Belgrade, and this reports expert Communist opinion in Yugoslavia that there was Moscow-Peking jealousy over Korea.

The Pravda references may simply be an effort to intimidate the United States or Japan or both in connection with a peace settlement. How vain is that hope in respect of the United States is demonstrated in the latest American note to Moscow. It is one of the sharpest ever to come out of the State Department. We remain unmoved in our course of expediting a peace settlement by all the 47 nations who are still in a state of war with Japan, but we shall not brook any nation's effort to exercise a veto right. As to Japan, the Japanese, as Premier Yoshida said in a recent article in Foreign Affairs, intend to go ahead with the peace conversations, with or without Russian concurrence. They are, moreover, prepared to do their part as a sovereign state in contributing to collective security in cooperation with the signatories of the peace settlement.

There is no reason to suppose that Japan lags behind the non-Communist world in its antipathy to communism. But here there is a difference, and it must be pondered by our policy makers. Japan does draw a distinction between Moscow and Peking. Even the Japanese Communists themselves have an orientation to Mao Tze-tung rather than to Stalin. That is another argument against a Russian move against Japan—unless the Russians wish to reestablish a position in Asia which, judging from what is happening in Korea, they seem to have delegated to China.

Seven-Year Service

The seven-year military service plan being discussed in the Pentagon is a good deal less drastic than it seems. Actually, it would provide for full-time service by most young men for a period of 24 to 30 months, with the remainder of the time spent in the active reserve or National Guard. This is the only way now visible in which military manpower needs for a long period of mobilization can be met without relying disproportionately on those who have already devoted much time to military service.

Such a scheme is in part the concept of universal service this newspaper has been talking about. Where the plans do not seem to have crystallized is on the question of how much stress to place on the needs of the Nation for an uninterrupted flow of scientists and leaders outside strictly military service. Here, it seems to us, the point is that national service is of equal worth wherever it is performed. Even the Russians at the peak of World War II saw to it that selected young men remained in college.

This does not imply that the number of men selected to serve elsewhere than in the military forces need be large; indeed, the needs of the services would not permit it. The pool of available manpower which comes of age each year is not great. Irrespective of what is done by way of universal service legislation, it undoubtedly will be necessary to expand present draft ages and the 21-month period if the 3,500,000-man military force is to be attained.

Most of the controversy now revolves around methods of college training. The Trytten plan recommends that a certain percentage of young men be selected on the basis of aptitude and intelligence to go to college, and that after college they be required to perform their national service either in essential industry or in the armed forces. Another plan, said to be favored by Dr. Karl Compton, would require a relatively short period of basic training first and then college training for selected candidates, after which the military services would decide where the men could best be used.

These plans are not far apart, and doubtless a compromise can be worked out. Whether scientists, say, receive college training in or out of uniform is less important than that they receive it. The essential considerations in our opinions are, first, that the obligation of every young man for national service be firmly established, and second, that the over-all direction, while paying close attention to military needs, be in civilian hands.

The seven-year service plan also calls for a thoroughgoing shakeup of the reserve components. A virile reserve should consist of men actually available for service—and this means the weeding out of men who because of their need in industry or for other good reasons are not available. Apart from the men with actual mobilization designations, the present indiscriminate calls might well be tempered with a point system similar to that employed for demobilization after World War II. Beyond this, of course, the adoption of a long-range program offers an admirable opportunity to consolidate the National Guard and the reserves.

THE SHORTCUT THROUGH THE PASTURE

There is only one way to enter the pasture lot
Because there is not a gate nor a fence of stone:
There is no one to ask, but the truth of things makes known
If a boy may come here to walk, if a boy may not.

There is only one way to walk, if he comes at all,
Careful and silent here, and alone—and alone:
It is by the path that the regular wind has blown
That has the earth for a floor and a fern for a wall.

He must be small in spirit as never before,
Seeing what spiders see in the spring grass,
Glissant in spirit as the snake he must pass
In the canyon that admits him and no more,
Where the tangle and briar turn green, bearing the rise
And throb of fluids through the hollow vein
As God Incarnate comes from the earth again
Astounding the serpent's blood and the spider's eyes.

As from all forgotten and vacant land
He will return. In the day or the dark
He will hear silent things and will hark,
He will see small things and will understand.

Original States

Debate about the 11 silver stars on the marble mantling behind the Speaker's desk in the redecorated House of Representatives at the Capital is simply silly.

On an historical and factual basis, if the stars represent States, there should be only nine.

Two of the original units, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania, were and still are, not States but commonwealths.

In the basic confederation of the former colonies, Rhode Island and North Carolina were vocally, politically and militarily active; but, for reasons of their own with which one can hardly quarrel, after answering the roll call of the Union they merely voted "Present."

For completeness of the record it should be noted that Virginia, at least in the accepted view of its citizens, was something special and apart, hence the name, now happily almost forgotten, "The Old Dominion."

To have 48 States we must admit to the union the territories of Alaska and Hawaii. Meanwhile, we must just struggle along with the 46 States and the two commonwealths. At a venture, I surmise that the Union will still survive!

THOMAS QUINN BEESLEY.
Washington.

Before the Constitution was framed and submitted to the 13 States for ratification, the States had already fought and won the war for American independence under the Articles of Confederation. Carolina and Rhode Island were advised by Thomas Jefferson not to ratify the Constitution until proper guarantees of human rights and religious freedom were annexed to the fundamental law and, as soon as this guarantee was given by Congress, these two States ratified the Constitution. These two States should be complimented, because their insistence on the adoption of the Bill of Rights is what has made the American Republic the great Nation it is.

Program For The Crisis

The leaders of the Communist world have clearly shown their intent to attack the free world by military means as well as by subversion and propaganda. It is, therefore, of first importance to realize that both the United States and the United Nations are under planned attack.

We, therefore, urge that:

The President and Congress proclaim a state of national emergency.

The Government undertake immediate full-scale mobilization of the armed forces and the industrial economy.

We reaffirm our unalterable determination to support the decision of the United Nations to defend Korea against aggression whether or not military necessity calls for the temporary withdrawal of United Nations forces.

The United Nations enforce economic and other necessary sanctions against Communist China unless its forces are withdrawn from Korea.

We refuse to recognize the Chinese Communist government, and we oppose recognition by the United Nations.

We provide economic aid and military supplies to the Chinese Nationalists government on Formosa and maintain the United States fleet there.

We provide economic aid and military supplies to the anti-Communist forces on the Chinese mainland, French Indo-China and Malaya.

We encourage India and Pakistan to strengthen themselves against any contingency, and we provide them with economic and military supplies.

We accelerate the negotiation of peace treaties with Japan and Germany, providing for their rearmament under agreed controls.

We use all means to bring about the fullest measure of common defense by every member of the Atlantic Pact, giving our utmost support to those nations which fully cooperate in mobilizing their strength, recognizing that the defense of the North Atlantic area is our major strategic interest and responsibility.

The Government create a non-partisan advisory council, representing all segments of the population, including management, labor, agriculture, etc.

The executive departments regularly consult with the leaders of both parties in the Senate and House of Representatives in formulating national policy in the current emergency.

We intern all Communists and subversives classified as dangerous by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

We assist, within the limitation of essential military priorities, all governments and individuals willing to fight Communist aggression.

"Macbeth" Denied

I am a student of a 12A English class which has been studying Macbeth. The motion picture, Macbeth, was playing at a local theater. I called to see whether colored could attend and the answer was "No." There could not be a day set aside for English classes to attend, either. I was told that at the first of this year this would appear at the Booker T. Theater. But we have now completed our study of Macbeth.

Since our colored and white soldiers are fighting for the same cause — freedom — why can't we go to see a movie that illustrates the cruelty of dictatorship?

Coats For Home School

As a result of the article in Bill Gold's column about the children at the Industrial Home School Annex needing warm coats, we received enough gifts to supply every child in the institution with a new coat for Christmas.

There was also an abundance of filled stockings, candy canes, toys, clothing, equipment, etc. In fact, enough to make this the happiest Christmas ever experienced by the majority of our children.

The warm, homey appeal of Mr. Gold's column touches the heart of all of us and the type of service he is rendering to the community is of inestimable value.

"Career Witness"

A very cynical and insulting editorial (September 25) concerning myself has come to my attention.

According to this editorial, I am making a career of being a witness in anti-Communist cases for the United States Government —according to The Washington Post, a reprehensible occupation.

If the editorial writer had waited until I was off the witness stand, he would have found out from the record that in the three years in which I have appeared in about 10 cases, I have been paid the grand sum of $420 in witness fees, hardly enough for a career.

As to my having sworn at other times to my birth in Scranton, Pa., that was based on a sworn affidavit by my mother on record in Scranton. This controversy dates back 20 years, which was terminated by the Naturalization Service advising me to accept naturalization.

As to the former Communist leaders who stick their necks out in testifying instead of dodging subpoenas—well, sir, it may well be that we are of the combative breed, who, having mistakenly taken the risk to serve false gods, now recognize the menace of this devil's brew and are willing to do more than the average citizen against it. If this be a crime, you can make the most of it. As to this being a career or a pleasure, you can have it.

Slaves Behind The Curtain

Since the beginning of this month, Stalin and his whole system have been on trial in Paris. David Rousset, the famous author and artist, author of two monumental books on concentration camps and especially those of Stalin's empire, a man who had spent many years in Hitler's concentration camps and knows the feel of it, has told the truth about Stalin's system. In turn he was libeled by the Communist monthly—Les Lettres Francaises.

David Rousset is now suing the magazine. He has arrayed some important witnesses with first-hand experience in Stalin's slave labor camps. Among them are Elinor Lipper, the Swiss Communist who spent 11 years in Stalin's hell and has written a highly provocative book; Valnetin Gonzales, former Communist general of the Spanish Civil War fame; Suzanne Leonhard, formerly an ardent German Communist with 12 years in Stalin's prison camps to her credit, and many, many others.

Stalin has managed to deceive the gullibles and wishful thinkers by controlling the comings and goings of foreigners to Russia, by controlling every avenue of information, by a lying propaganda abroad. Here is a golden opportunity to let the world in on the Stalin secrets about life behind the Iron Curtain, the real life suffered by the 95 percent of Russia's population. But one seeks in vain in our newspapers for a word about the illuminating testimony of the numerous witnesses against the hell that prevails in Stalin's empire.

That it is Stalin who is on trial was brought out in the Paris court on December 9, a report which has just been received. One of the witnesses on the stand was Alexander Weisberg, a former Communist engineer from Austria, who went to Russia in 1931 to help Stalin build socialism with his expert knowledge of physics, but landed in a slave labor camp instead. For six years he lingered in those camps. His parents and entire family perished in Hitler's concentration camps.

The Swiss former Communist Lipper testified how women in the slave labor camps are forced to work from 12 to 14 hours daily at cutting timber in temperatures of 50 below zero in regions where the winter lasts about eight months, at up to their waist in snow or digging the frozen earth, shabbily dressed, on starvation rations consisting of black bread and water—camps where the annual mortality of inmates runs never below 30 percent.

The trial will continue until the early part of January. There is still time to give the American people a glimpse of what life behind the Iron Curtain is. At this critical time, when our country has been at war with the Soviet system all over the world, it is certainly high time for the press of America to give space to the subject dealing with the main problem: Know your enemy in the Kremlin.

Search For A Pentecost

By Malvina Lindsay

People's Urge To Pray

YOU ARE surprised at the way the movement for making New Year's Eve a day of prayer has taken hold. You had expected it to be one of those usual worthy observances, spurred on by churches, patronizingly approved by communities.

The 38 million or so adults who regularly attend church would, of course, pray especially hard as part of their Sunday routine. Some of the 59 million unchurched or casually churched might utter some vague supplications for guidance for their Nation.

Cynics as usual would cite the manifold wars that prayer had failed to halt; perhaps ask embarrassing questions about a 24-hour armistice on hate both domestic and foreign. And the millions of prospective New Year's Eve revelers wouldn't give it a thought.

But now for days, even for weeks and months, this prayer movement has been gaining momentum. In many churches it is nothing new. But its expression in a special observance has largely come about by pressure from the bottom up, from average people.

Again the cynics are ready to cry: "The devil was sick . . ." and to point out that always persons when deeply troubled and afraid "get religion." But some way you don't feel that this wide-spread yearning for mass prayer is founded to any great extent on fear. You don't feel it is merely a call on Jehovah for protection from Soviet atom bombs. Nor is it a primitive supplication for a wall crumbling victory led by a Joshua.

NO, IT IS rather the reaching outside themselves for enlightenment of a people who feel momentous decisions pressing heavily upon them. It is an effort, perhaps subconscious, to come in contact with mind forces that will perform the miracle of making them as wise, as strong, as right as their role in history is now demanding.

For suddenly — and at long last—Americans seem to be waking to what they face in decisions and in responsibility. No wonder they are ready to pray!

You envision them tomorrow, possibly 50 million strong, in churches, in community groups, or singly in homes praying, or trying to pray. Certainly in those hours the mental atmosphere of the continent will be freer than for many a day of enmity, rancor, hostility, fear. Many a person will attain for a few minutes at least a sense of tranquility to bring to consideration of his Nation's dilemma. If nothing more, he will have a chance to think.

You think of the political significance of this occasion. Here is the individual in public demonstration of another free power, his spiritual force. Perhaps that is why so many are responding to the appeal to pray. Here at last is something every "poor little me" can do. He is no longer a helpless chessman on a board waiting to be moved as others decree. He can take some personal action about the world. He can throw his spiritual weight around. And surely as he prays tomorrow he will remember that in a dictatorship even freedom of prayer is curtailed as far as possible.

YOU CAN hear the cynics again, "What will come of all this praying, but another big Communist push in Korea?" Yet you think of the many recorded miracles of prayer through the ages . . . of the evidences of the power of prayer in individual lives . . . of how prayer of some kind has been man's buttress (often a last-chance one to be sure) almost from his beginning.

You think of how mind—consciousness—is edging more and more into the language of science . . . of how the universe is being more and more resolved into intangibles . . . of the growing relation of thought and emotion to disease . . . of the many experiments in college laboratories in extra-sensory perception, which in time may show with the cold exactitude of science how very far a human being's thought force may reach.

You wonder how far tomorrow's prayers will reach, both inwardly and outwardly. Perhaps that will depend mostly on how people pray. Will they earnestly seek guidance for themselves and their leaders to do the right, or will they merely supplicate for a vague peace that would assure their own comfortable status quo? Will they pray that those they fear be crushed or that they be changed? Will they bring to their praying the trickling power of a fearful, cramped spirit or the surging power of one filled with largeness and faith?

You think again of the cynics. No, many tragic wars have happened in spite of prayer. But, then, has prayer, any more than Christianity, ever been tried enough?

New Year Pledge

With the coming of the new year, I should like to suggest the following resolution:

"I resolve to study with an open mind the proposals of Trygvie Lie, Walter Reuther, Grenville Clark, the United World Federalists, and those which the President made on October 24, for substituting a system of international security under law and order for the present war system. Having done so, I shall take appropriate action commensurate with the present need. If this fails, I shall at least be spared the sense of guilt of one who has not even tried; but if my cause succeeds, I shall know the joy of partnership with those who helped to save their loved ones from the withering blast of World War III."

Building Air Might

By Marquis Childs

Finletter–McCone Teamwork

IN THIS, the winter of our discontent, it is not difficult to find causes for complaint. The chorus of recrimination rises as though Washington were a wailing wall and the source of all the ills of mankind.

Childs

It is therefore news—under the man-bites-dog definition—to report a field in which progress is being made and men are working with a minimum of snafu. Directing the rapid expansion of the Air Force is a team that is pulling together effectively and efficiently to do one of the two or three most essential jobs in the rearmament program.

Secretary of the Air Force is Thomas K. Finletter, a New York lawyer who has served in several previous Government assignments in connection with the last war and its aftermath. As chairman of the President's Air Policy Commission, he recommended a 70-group Air Force, and the maintenance of an expanded aircraft industry.

He has believed all along that preparedness to meet the threat of Soviet expansion should move at a much swifter pace. Consequently, when he accepted the post last April he was prepared to push as hard as possible for an expansion of air power.

Louis Johnson, then Secretary of Defense, was still plugging for economy in the defense budget. But this did not inhibit Finletter, who came in with a more or less independent mandate from the President. The retiring Secretary of the Air Force, W. Stuart Symington, had tangled with Johnson repeatedly on the issue of economy versus expansion.

LAST February 1 in a speech at Baylor University in Texas Symington called for a reappraisal of America's defense budget, pointing to the radically altered situation created by Russia's having exploded an atomic bomb and having built an air force capable of delivering such bombs against American targets. But this served chiefly to quicken the feud with Johnson. Symington felt so frustrated that there was nothing to do but get out.

Without the handicap of having engaged in previous controversy, Finletter came in as a new broom. Moreover, he has a show-me kind of skepticism which is like an X-ray. This was applied in salutary fashion both to military claims and pretensions and civilian red tape and reluctance.

One of Finletter's first aims was to speed up the construction of the continental radar warning system. He was told that the money simply's wasn't in the budget for such a speed-up. His answer was that somehow the money would be found.

Finletter's partner is Undersecretary John A. McCone. McCone is a successful businessman and engineer who was also on the Air Policy Commission. He has drive and organizing ability to a high degree without any of the bluster sometimes associated with those capacities.

McCone is pushing through an aircraft procurement program that has begun to get rolling in a big way. Within two years the number of air groups will be approximately doubled for a total of 84. This is on the basis of reopening plants that were closed or partially closed at the end of World War II. By constructing new plants it is estimated that 168 groups could be created by the end of 1952.

ALREADY 25 air bases have been reopened since June. Soon the personnel of the Air Force will be nearly double the 412,000 in the service at the time of the Korean attack.

The pride and joy of the team of Finletter and McCone is the big new B-47 jet bomber. Units equipped with the B-47 will be ready by the end of 1951 or perhaps even earlier. While its actual cruising speed and range are still secret, it is known that it will travel at 600 miles and over and carry the atomic bomb at that speed.

Finletter flew in the B-47 the other day. He sat at the controls and reported later that he was a bit startled when the pilot told him to make a 180 degree turn with the plane traveling at hair-raising speed. Beyond the B-47 is the B-52 which is an even longer jump into the supersonic world.

According to advices believed as trustworthy as most, the best long range bomber the Russians have is an improved B-29. They are believed to be working on a B-36 type. But the important fact is that the improved B-29 can carry a Russian atomic bomb to targets in the United States. And the Air Force has never tried to conceal the fact that a certain number of thos. bombs would get through any defense now in sight.

But the retaliation to be meted out by a greatly expanded Air Force would be terrible. The threat of this retaliation will, it is hoped, keep the peace in the coming critical months while the land power of the North Atlantic nations is being built. If that is the outcome, thanks will be due in no small part to the production drive of the past six months. It is an example that could be followed in other fields where defense production has lagged.

Cat, Rat Pals Offered as Peace Models

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

CLEVELAND, Dec. 29.—Advice on two problems, world peace and the national shortage of physicians, was offered separately here today by scientists in annual assembly.

1. Dr. Loh Seng Thai, psychology professor at Tulane University, tipepd off the United Nations that people, just like his paired cat and rat, must cooperate to survive.

2. Dr. Paul B. Sears, Yale sociologist, proposed that candidates rejected by crowded medical schools be trained for limited-practice service on ordinary injuries and ills, as bachelors of medicine.

Five-Day Convention

Their suggestions came during meetings here at the 117th annual convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Some 6000 members in all the fields of science are attending the five-day convention, which ends Saturday.

Dr. Tsai said he sent his cat and rat message on world unity to officials of the United Nations. Included in his plea, he said, were pictures of the two animals, playing, working and eating together.

"If such natural enemies as the cat and rat can get along together," asked Dr. Tsai, "why can't people?"

The speaker said that all he had to do to train the strange pair was to teach them that unless they worked together they couldn't get food. This happened, he explained, as soon as they learned the barrier between them and their mutual food bowl wouldn't open till each stepped simultaneously on release buttons in their cages.

Example For Nations

"They learned that it was futile for one to step on a button when the other did not cooperate," said Dr. Tsai. "They learned what nations need to learn, teamwork and cooperation."

Dr. Sears, and other scientists who said they backed his proposal but did not want their names used, stated that limited-service physicians could be trained in comparatively quick and cheap courses to handle many of the patients now treated by practicing physicians. The net result, he said, would be to make medical care available to more people.

He urged the American Medical Association, which has vetoed any proposal to lower doctor-training standards, to take the initiative in working out arrangements for such limited-service training.

Bronk, President-Elect

At today's general meeting of the association it was announced that Dr. Detlev W. Bronk, president of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md., was chosen president-elect of the organization of 218 science societies with a total membership of 50,000. He will take office January 1, 1952, replacing Dr. Kirtley F. Mather, professor of geology at Harvard, who becomes president Monday. The outgoing president is Dr. Roger Adams, University of Illinois.

A-Bomb Word Passed Late To M'Arthur

CLEVELAND, Dec. 29.—The scientist who directed wartime development of the atom bomb disclosed here today that Gen. Douglas MacArthur wasn't told of its perfection until two weeks before the first bomb was dropped on Japan.

But when informed, the general "quickly took the ball from there, and gave a brilliant exposition" of how such bombs could best be used, said Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology Corp.

Dr. Compton disclosed the circumstances for the first time in an interview here prior to receiving a $1000 award tonight for his research and administrative ability.

The award, first annual presentation of the William Procter prize for scientific achievement, established recently by Dr. Procter of Bar Harbor, Me., was tendered at a general session of the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

In an address to the association Dr. Compton warned that Russia has excellent scientists, and said the United States would be missing a "good bet" if it failed to try to build a hydrogen bomb.

"The morals of the H-bomb bother me no more than the morals of war itself," Compton said. He added that while "America is in a better position now than in 1939." It has Russia to worry about.

"We have always underrated Russian science," he stated. "They were good before the war and probably have more than ever now."

He also implied there was some doubt whether Russia really has the atomic bomb. "There was an atomic explosion over there, surely," he said, "but no report of anything else."

Martin Urges Caution Over New Taxes, Non-War Costs

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

House GOP Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr. (Mass.), yesterday urged a "cautious approach" to new taxes and joined Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.) in calling for cutbacks in nondefense spending.

He said Republicans in the new Congress will "ask a lot of questions" about the Administration's reported 75-billion-dollar budget and may want to investigate what happened to the 50 billions spent for defense before the Korean War.

"But we are not obstructionists," Martin told newsmen. "We will support every dollar necessary for preparedness and we are not carrying any foreign policy chips on our shoulders. We just want to be sure we get prudent housekeeping."

Martin, one of the first Republican leaders to return for the last fling of the Eighty-first Congress and the convening Eighty-second at noon Wednesday, noted Republicans will have a big voice in the new Congress as a result of the November elections. He demanded increased GOP membership on such major House committees as Ways and Means, Appropriations, Armed Services and Banking and Currency.

On Wednesday the House GOP vote will step up from 169 in the old Congress to 199 in the new. The Democratic majority will dwindle from 261 to 234 (plus two minor party votes). House officials said it may take more than a week to work out the new committee ratios and assignments.

Martin indorsed the Byrd-type of nondefense cut-backs in the wake of a presidential jibe at the Virginian. Mr. Truman told a Tuesday press conference he didn't believe Byrd knows much about the budget but was glad the Virginian offered to cooperate.

Byrd retorted yesterday that the Truman budget "has reached such astronomical proportions that he would be a bold man who would certify that he understood all of its details."

"But this is certain," he added. "Unless the Truman budget is reduced to essentials we are faced with financial chaos and ultimate disaster. If Mr. Truman could comprehend this basic fact the Nation would benefit."

Byrd said he stood by his pledge to support a budget "with nonmilitary expenditures reduced to the minimum required to give effective support to the defense effort."

In his recent letter to the President Byrd suggested nonmilitary spending be reduced about seven billion dollars. Martin told reporters he would be pleased if as much as three billion can be trimmed from the budget.

"It would keep taxes from going that much higher," the House GOP leader said. "I'm not saying we won't increase taxes again. We'll probably have to do it. But there's a point of diminishing returns. We've got to be awfully careful or we'll kill off our prosperity."

On the foreign policy front, Martin took issue with President Truman's statement that former President Hoover's recent speech was isolationist. Hoover proposed we pull back our defense lines and hold up aid to Europe until the Western countries build up a "sure dam" against Red aggression.

Calls U. S. Reaction Favorable

"The reaction of the country was favorable," said Martin. "The people didn't interpret it as isolationism. I understood him to say he was willing to cooperate but wanted other nations to do their full part."

Martin said he thinks Republicans in Congress will insist the Administration "justify" all foreign aid appropriations.

"We are willing to do our full part but the other nations must do something. They ought to give as well as receive."

Martin expressed doubt that Secretary of State Dean Acheson will resign, or the President will oust him, despite the resolution adopted by House and Senate Republicans calling for his replacement.

"We merely expressed what we thought was best for national unity, but the President doesn't have to take our advice," said Martin. "I don't think he will."

U. N.'s End Would Be 'Disaster,' Political Science Group Told

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

The United Nations was described last night as a collective security system against which "the centrally directed Communist imperialism" is in rebellion.

"Although a collective security system will not insure peace, Ernest A. Gross, Deputy United States Representative to the United Nations, told members of the American Political Association, "the disappearance of the collective security system would be a certain invitation to disaster far exceeding even the great threat which now hangs over civilization."

Gross, speaking at the Hotel Statler, was one of several speakers at night meetings of the association, which concludes its three-day annual meeting today.

Dr. Gulick Elected

Dr. Luther H. Gulick, director of the Institute of Public Administration of New York, was chosen president-elect at an afternoon business session.

Gulick will succeed Dr. Peter H. Odegard, of the University of California, following the association's annaual meeting in San Francisco next August. Odegard today succeeds Dr. James K. Pollock, University of Michigan, as president.

Dr. George B. Galloway, senior specialist in the Library of Congress Legislative Reference Service, was one of three vice presidents elected. The others are Dr. Paul H. Appleby, Syracuse University, and Dr. J. Alton Burdine, University of Texas.

Dr. Edward H. Litchfield, executive director of the association, with headquartes in Washington, was elected secretary-treasurer.

'Fundamental Decision'

Gross said he believed "the fundamental decision which faces the free world is whether to abandon the collective security system in the face of the large scale rebellion against that system.

"The centrally directed Communist imperialism is now engaged in what may be its decisive effort to bring to its own terms the basis upon which the international order will be conducted henceforth.

"It has proclaimed openly by force of arms, by overt violence, and by crude threat its intention to subvert the international system as it has subverted numerous national systems in countries now reduced to vassalage," Gross said.

"It has embarked on a course which, if successful, would leave a stunted United Nations, serving as a Soviet satellite."

Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.), member of the United States Delegation to the U. N. General Assembly, speaking on the program with Gross, said this country should expand rather than give up its foreign aid programs.

Denouncing defeatist proposals for a change in foreign policy, Sparkman asked: "How long could we survive holed up in a 'garrison state' without an ally in the world?"

At a panel discussion of Far Eastern affairs earlier, Hu Shih, former Chinese Nationalist Ambassador, said there are "three antitoxins in China which might operate against the Communists. He descibed them as "an almost anarchist aversion to government; a long tradition of love for freedom; and, the traditional exaltation of the individual's right to doubt everything."

But Dr. H. Arthur Steiner of the University of California, expressed the belief that the Communists have established the strongest government in China's history and are in the process of consolidating their grip on the country.

Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), chairman of the Senate Crime Investigating Committee and a former vice president of the association, described the work of the committee at an evening meeting in the Statler.

"There has been a great deal of talk as to whether there is a single, dominant, Nation-wide organization of racketeers," the Senator said, "but it is a little too early for me to say. I have come to no definite conclusion yet."

Bertram M. Gross, of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, speaking at a night meeting in the Hotel Mayflower, told members that the percentage of Americans voting 50 years ago was greater than now.

In 1900, approximately 74 percent of the eligible voters went to the polls, Gross said, whereas in the 1948 Presidential election only 54 percent voted.

Leon Keyserling, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, told a luncheon session that industrial capacity was in itself not enough, but it was the speed with which it could be mobilized for defense work that would insure the Nation's survival.

Survey Shows Tuberculosis Hits Many Medical Students

Medical students in American colleges have a higher rate of tuberculosis than the general population, according to first reports of a survey conducted by a committee of the Association of Interns and Medical Students, meeting in annual convention here this week.

A questionnaire on tuberculosis incidence was sent to 71 approved medical schools in the country concerning the period from 1940 to 1950. Answers received so far from 40 of the schools show that for the 10-year period, medical students had 4 cases per thousand students per year.

For the same period, and in the same age group in New York, the case rate for general population was 1.2 cases per thousand per year.

Association delegates, who are meeting at Howard University, yesterday were drafting a resolution which they plan to present to a plenary session today urging positive action to curb the high TB rate among medical students.

The resolution is expected to urge medical schools to establish their own TB control programs.

The survey points out that five medical schools with a high rate, of from 5 to 9 TB cases per thousand students between 1940 and 1946, cut the TB incidence down to a single case during the four following years by establishing TB control measures.

Dr. Dean F. Smiley, secretary of the Association of American Medical Colleges, said the data prepared by the interns' and students' association is not available anywhere at the present time and would be valuable in a study of the spread of tuberculosis.

Results of the survey are to be published in a scientific journal next spring, association officials said. Big factor in the higher incidence of the disease among medical students is believed to be their more constant exposure to tuberculosis in hospital work.

General Farm Price Rise Seen Before Ceilings Can Be Set

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Prices of all but 9 or 10 important farm products can go up from 1 or 2 percent to as much as double their present levels before price ceilings can be imposed, a Government report yesterday disclosed.

In fact, several highly placed Agriculture Department officials admitted yesterday that the present price stabilization law makes it next to impossible to consider applying price ceilings on any food or other farm commodities with very few exceptions for several months—probably as long as the present law will exist—June 30, 1951.

Last autumn the potent farm bloc in Congress put three provisions into the price stabilization law that virtually threw a monkey wrench into the whole price control machinery. Two of these provide that ceilings cannot be put on farm products at levels:

1. Lower than parity. They may, in the judgment of the price administrator, be higher than parity, however.

2. Lower than the highest price a commodity cost between May 24 and June 24—the month before the Korean war started.

The third gimmick fixes the levels for price ceilings for products manufactured from agricultural commodities. These ceilings must be high enough to reflect parity or the May-June base for the base commodities, plus "fair and equitable margins for processing." This provision really musses up the entire law.

Some Items Above Parity

Yesterday's price report showed that although farm prices generally were 8 percent above parity as of December 15, very few items were up to parity. Several of these were far above parity. The items above parity and their percentage of parity were cotton, 125 percent; rice, 101; types 21 and 24 tobacco, 113 percent; wool, 150 percent; cottonseed (the chief ingredient in margarine and many cooking fats) 146; soybeans, 102; beef cattle, 141; lambs, 138 and veal calves 143.

On the other hand, such commodities at oranges were only 46 percent of parity and can go up more than double before reaching parity and lemons were only 52 percent.

Apples are 77 percent of parity; grapefruit 47 percent; sweet potatoes 71 percent; beans 86 percent; milk 89 percent; potatoes 49 pecent, and many types of tobacco ranging from 86 to 92 percent.

The law's provision that processed commodities must be granted ceilings that reflect the legal minimums for the basic items, is one that has officials puzzled. For instance, it would mean that ceilings can be placed on certain cuts of beef, but other cuts are not yet up to the parity level.

It also might be possible to put a price ceiling on certain types of canned tomatoes, and yet not on catsup or other tomato products.

Many officials believe that the new Congress must drastically amend the agricultural provisions of the law if price ceilings are going to be effectively enforced during the life of the present law, which expires next June 30.

Yesterday's report showed that farm prices rose about 4 percent between November 15 and December 15. This put them 15.6 percent higher than they were just before the Korean war started. They are still about 7 percent below the record level set in January 1948.

Commodities that went up during the month were eggs, wheat, corn, soybeans, flaxseed, cottonseed and wool. Those that went down were cotton, grapefruit, hogs and chickens.

The average prices received by farmers on December 15, compared with parity—the lowest price at which ceilings may be fixed—were reported as follows:

	Average Price	Parity
Wheat, bu.	$ 2.03	$ 2.31
Rice, cwt.	5.32	5.25
Corn, bu.	1.45	1.88
Milk, cwt.	4.07	4.58
Barley, bu.	1.19	1.64
Cottonseed, ton	102.00	69.70
Rye	1.37	1.79

Officials pointed out that there will be a change in parity next month. At present the parity formula base for the so-called basics, is either the 1909-14 average, or the average price for the last 10 years, whichever is higher. Next month only the formula based on the average for the last 10 years will prevail.

However, next month the average for the last 10 years will change. The formula base will run from 1941 to 1950 inclusive, instead of 1940-1949 as this month. That makes estimates of what parity levels will be a month from now, or the prospects for price controls fuzzier than ever.

Ilse Koch Calms Down To Continue Trial

AUGSBURG, Germany, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—After three weeks of hysterics denounced by a court psychiatrist as "feigned insanity," Ilse Koch appeared in court today to continue her trial for mass murder at Buchenwald.

At today's first session since the Christmas holiday, Judge George Maginot asked Ilse if she felt capable of taking part. She quietly answered, "Yes."

Student Worker Wins Share In Streptomycin Royalties

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 29 (NYHT).—Dr Selman A. Waksman, Rutgers University microbiologist, agreed in Superior Court today that a former student, now a professor at Brooklyn College, shared in the discovery of the antibiotic drug streptomycin, and said he would share in the royalties.

As part of a settlement of the suit brought against Dr. Waksman by Dr. Albert Schatz, Brooklyn, Dr. Schatz will receive three percent of net royalties on the drug and $125,000 for relinquishing foreign rights.

Dr. Schatz agreed to retract charges made in his complaint filed March 10 that Dr. Waksman had used "fraud and duress" to induce his student to assign his patent rights to the Rutgers Research and Endowment Foundation. Dr. Schatz' name appeared on the original patent application in 1945.

25 Others to Share

Dr. Waksman and the foundation, an incorporated organization not directly connected with Rutgers University, agreed to pay 25 other graduate students and assistants a total of 7 percent of net royalties. Judge C. Thomas Schettino dismissed the suit following agreement on the settlement.

Dr. Schatz, who was a graduate student at Rutgers working with Dr. Waksman from June to October in 1943, first sought 50 percent of all royalties for his part in the discovery. The net royalties to September 30 were estimated at $2,360,000. In an examination before trial Dr. Waksman admitted he had received about $350,000 in royalties, with the remainder going to the foundation.

Streptomycin, a drug obtained from a mold, has been found useful in the treatment of such diseases as tuberculosis, pneumonia, dysentery, whooping cough and syphilis, in certain forms.

Dr. Robert C. Clothier, president of Rutgers University and the foundation, said that, as heretofore, 80 percent of the royalties will remain in the foundation for further scientific research including the work of the university's institute of microbiology. He explained that of the 20 percent remaining, 10 percent will continue to be paid to Dr. Waksman.

"The other 10 percent," he said, "will be distributed in two ways: 14 of those most closely concerned with the work in streptomycin will share in the royalties accruing subsequent to October 1, 1950; 12 others, less directly associated with the work, will receive cash bonuses."

Dr. Schatz will receive the largest share of those participating after Dr. Waksman—3 percent, Dr. Clothier said.

[Among those who will receive bonuses, according to the Associated Press, is Dr. Dorothy G. Smith, Frederick, Md.]

Britain to Replace Her Minister To Chinese Reds

LONDON, Dec. 29 (AP).—Britain said today she is replacing her diplomatic representative in Communist China.

The Foreign Office said J. C. Hutchinson, Minister and Charge d'Affaires in Peiping, will return to London soon on his retirement from the foreign service. He will be succeeded by L. H. Lamb, who is expected to leave for China early in February. The Foreign Office made no immediate comment on the change of envoys.

Britain was among the first western powers to recognize the Red Chinese regime.

Lamb, who is 50, was British minister to the Chinese Nationalist regime from February, 1947, to September, 1949 and has spent nearly 30 years in the British consular service in China.

Rule Book Bans 4 New Epithets From Parliament

LONDON, Dec. 29 (NYHT).—The fifteenth edition of Sir Thomas Erskine May's "Treatise on the Law, Privileges, Proceedings, and Usage of Parliament," shows that four new epithets have been banned on the floor of the House of Commons.

It lists the new epiteths as: "cheat," "not a damned one of you opposite," "stool pigeons," and "bastard."

Among the old-timers on the list of words and expressions members of Parliament must not use about each other are: "Scurrilous," "dishonest," "vicious and vulgar," "criminal," "insulting dog," "blether" (of a speech), "lie down, dog," "behaving like a jackass," and "swine."

Strangely enough even "impertinence" and "impudent" and "rude remarks" are ruled out as unparliamentary.

City Churches to Join In Peace Prayer Day

Prayers for peace in a troubled world will be said in Washington area churches Sunday as worshipers here join in a world-wide plea for divine guidance.

The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Catholic Archbishop of Washington, has called upon pastors here to have New Year's midnight masses, under special privileges extended by the Holy See. It is the second successive year such prayers for unity and peace have been ordered in Catholic churches.

Almost all other churches also are planning some type of special observance, with pastors admonishing their congregations to begin the New Year with an invocation rather than revelry. Many Protestant churches will hold watch-night services, lasting through midnight.

Leaders of the Methodist, American Baptist, Presbyterian, Protestant Episcopal, and the International Convention of the Disciples of Christ are among the many Protestants indorsing the day of prayer.

Archbishop O'Boyle has directed that a special New Year's prayer be added at the conclusion of all low masses which asks of God: "Give to Thy servants that peace which the world cannot give; that our hearts may be disposed to obey Thy commandments, and the fear of enemies being removed, our times, by Thy protection, may be peaceful."

Special prayers asking the Blessed Virgin to intercede with God for world peace also will be said during the Catholic holy hours, most of which will start about 11 p. m. Sunday.

Senate Sets a Record; In Sssion 9 Seconds

The Senate met for nine seconds yesterday shortest session in its history.

President pro tempore Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.) went through the motions of convening and recessing the chamber because the rules require a session at least once every three days unless Congress formally adjourns.

The Senate will meet again at noon Tuesday—this time for real business. It will be the last session before the 81st Congress expires. The House will meet Monday, also for work.

Church Plans Prayers for New Congress

Before the Eighty-second Congress convenes Wednesday noon, prayers for its guidance will be offered by the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A.

Methodists Are Largest Sect in U. S.

There were more Methodists listed in the United States last year than members of any other Protestant denomination.

Figures released this week indicate that way during the church still retains its ranking. It now has 8.9 million members, about 140,000 more than the previous year. But all denomination figures aren't in.

Contributions also showed an increase of more than 15 million dollars. The church was given 244.6 million dollars, of which nearly 74 million dollars was spent for building and improvements.

A visitor in town next week will be Dr. Frank N. D. Buchman, the 72-year-old founder of the Oxford Group and the Moral Rearmament movement, who recently returned from two years in Europe.

Dr. Buchman

A leading pacifist, Dr. Buchman is here for a convention of the Moral Rearmament group. He will also address a New Year's luncheon of the Lutheran Laymen Fellowship, Thursday at 12:30 p. m. in the Ambassador Hotel, 14th and K sts. nw.

Anti-Monopoly Bill Is Signed; Truman Voices Satisfaction

President Truman yesterday signed an anti-monopoly bill designed to prevent business mergers which would tend to lessen competition.

The legislation is an amendment to the 1914 Clayton anti-trust law.

"I have signed this act with great satisfaction, because it closes a gap in our anti-monopoly laws that has existed since 1914," Mr. Truman said in a statement.

The President explained that under the Clayton act, corporations were forbidden to weaken competition by buying up the stock of their competitors. But he said they were able to "defeat the purpose" of the law by buying up the assets, rather than the stock, of business rivals.

The amendment provides that the same restrictions will apply to the purchase of corporate assets as to the purchase of stock.

Caused Much Concentration

"Much of the concentration of economic power which has taken place since 1914 has been due to this gap in the law," Mr. Truman said.

"The closing of the gap is an important step in preventing the growth of monopolies and thus assuring the survival and health of free competitive enterprise."

The President said he will expect the Federal Trade Commission to be "alert and vigorous" in enforcing the new statute.

Even before Mr. Truman signed the bill, Senators O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), said passage of the amendment by the 81st Congress had halted merger of two big companies in the abrasives industry.

O'Mahoney identified the companies as the Carborundum Co. of Niagra Falls, N. Y., and the Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co., of St. Paul, Minn.

The Wyoming legislator wrote Attorney General McGrath and Chairman James M. Mead of the Federal Trade Commission, saying the firms announced earlier this week they were abandoning a merger of their property holdings.

He said the merger was to have been presented to stockholders for appoval on January 4.

The merger was dropped, O'Mahoney said, as a direct result of the amendment.

He said the companies planned the merger after being convicted last month in United States District Court at Boston on charges of monopolistic practices.

In his statement yesterday, Mr. Truman declared:

"I have repeatedly recommended the enactment of this legislation to the Congress, as a major element in the program of this Administration to prevent the gowth of monopoly and greater concentration of economic power and to create conditions favorable to small and independent business.

"I am very glad that this major piece of legislation has at last become law."

Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mr. DuFrane joined the Fire Department in 1919, serving in the southeast section of the city until he retired in 1947 as a member of Truck Company No. 8. He was commended for his part in fighting the Kann's warehouse fire in 1925.

A native of Hoboken, N. J., Mr. DuFrane served two years in the Navy during World War I.

East, West Play Today For Charity; Rebels Favored Over North

Profits in Shrine Classic Slated for Crippled Children

By Russ Newland

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 29 (AP).—The East and West all-star football squads go to bat for charity tomorrow in Kezar Stadium.

This is the game where men who made the sports headlines this season pool their talents to help little children find a better way in life. All profits go to the Shriners Crippled Children's Hospital.

More than $100,000 will be turned over to the benefit fund. In the past quarter-century, the hospital has received in excess of one and one-quarter million dollars.

Threaded through the history of this game are the names of some of the greatest stars of football.

The Eastern and Western 25-man squads slated to hook up tomorrow, carry on the tradition of greats and near-greats clashing in the name of charity.

All-America laurels for the East will be worn by Everett Grandelius, Michigan State halfback, and Don Stonesifer, Northwestern end. Eastern second team All-America players include "Bucky" Curtis, Vanderbilt end, and John Biltz, Ohio State guard.

The West doesn't quite match the East in luminaries but its lineup numbers Kyle Rote, versatile Southern Methodist back, and Jim Doran, Iowa State end, both All-America second team stature this season.

The East has won the last three games. Its coaches Bernie Bierman, Tuss McLaughry and Bob Voight, think they have the material to make it four in a row.

The East has been installed as a 6½-point favorite. The role of underdog suits the Western coaches, Marchie Schwartz, Howie Odell and Jess Neely. They have tried to use the odds as apsychological stimulant.

Southern Methodist's Rote, playing at fullback, is due for a workhorse role. Aside from ball-packing duties, he will handle the punting, throw passes if necessary, block, and possible take a turn at defense.

The West's two starting halfbacks, Wilford White of Arizona State, Tempe and Brad Rowland of McMurry College, are exceptionally fast breakaway threats.

Gray's Star Tackle Latest to Join List of Injured

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 29 (AP).—A slightly favored Southern team kept its fingers crossed tonight as another All-Star performer was crippled on the eve of tomorrow's Blue-Gray game.

Don Joyce, 220-pound Tulane tackle, was feared lost to the Rebels because of a pulled leg muscle. If he plays at all, coaches said, his activity will be "limited."

Outstanding as a defensive lineman in pre-game workouts, Joyce was counted on to shoulder much of the load for his Southern teammates. His loss would materially weaken the Gray forward wall.

The injury jinx has plagued Rebel coaches all week long since practice started last Saturday. All-American Eddie Salem, the passing star from Alabama, already is definitely on the sidelines with a bad knee and has been replaced by Georgia's Billy Nixon.

Four other players—End Gene Schroeder of Virginia, Tackles Chuck Shira of Army and Dan Rogas of Tulane and Guard Buddy Brown of Arkansas—have been banged up, but not seriously enough to keep them on the bench.

Northern coaches have been luckier. Only Tackle Charles Brown of Illinois is in danger of missing the game because of injuries. He bruised a shoulder in scrimmage.

Nevertheless, the Rebels are still rated a six-point favorite because of their potentially terrific aerial barrage.

Shoemaker Wins Three, Culmone 2; Joe Leads by 1

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 29 (AP).—Jockey Joe Culmone registered two winners in eight months at Tropical Park today to maintain a one-victory margin over Willie Shoemaker for the Nation's leading jockey honors of 1950.

Shoemaker, riding at Fairgrounds near New Orleans, rode three winners in eight races to boost his winners for the year to 381. Culmone's two victories gave him 382 wins during 1950.

Both are trying to break the 44-year-old record of 388 winners ridden during 1906 by Walter Miller.

Both will leave the country Sunday—the last day of the year—to ride as many mounts as possible. Culmone flies to Havana, Cuba, where he will ride at Oriental Park.

Shoemaker is scheduled to ride 11 horses at Caliente, Mexico. He will fly there following Saturday's race program at New Orleans.

Culmone scored aboard Brookmeade Stable's Stradivarius in the first race and then came from last place on N. L. Raffelman's Gasparilla to win the featured seventh race.

Shoemaker won the first two races—on Bonnie Donnie in the first and Big Ox in the second—and then got his third winner of the day aboard Cassina in the eighth.

Culome brought Gasparilla from last place to take the featured Damon Runyon Cancer Fund Purse.

Gasparilla made up about 10 lengths after leaving the backstretch to roar home a length and a half before Alphabetical. Mirthmaker was third, while Top Admiral, the pacemaker, tired at the end and finished fourth. Only six started.

Gasparilla, in taking his second straight purse at the meeting, paid $5.50, $3.30 and $2.80. He went over the mile and a sixteenth in 1.44 4/5.

Culmone said earlier in the day that he will donate all the money he earns from riding at Havana on Sunday to the Damon Runyon Cancer Fund. He will take his first plane ride to Cuba to finish out the last day of the year in the saddle there.

How They Stand:

	Mts.	1st	2d	3d
Culmone	1658	382	280	213
Shoemaker	1614	381	259	226

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 29 (AP).—The revamped Yale University basketball team won its first game in six starts tonight by ending the University of Miami's five-game winning streak, 78 to 62.

Capt. Edward McHugh, only surviving member of Yale's reshuffled first string paced the offensive with seven field goals and seven free throws for 21 points.

Sporting News Picks Red Rolfe

Sugar Bowl Battle Goes To Billikens In Overtime

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 29 (AP).—St. Louis toppled Kentucky, the nation's number one basketball team, from the undefeated ranks with a startling 43-42 upset in an overtime period of the Sugar Bowl basketball tournament tonight.

In the first game of the night's doubleheader, Bradley pulled away in the final eight minutes to defeat a scrappy Syracuse team 72-64.

Ray Sonnenberg won the game for St. Louis in the overtime by dropping a beautiful shot from 15 feet out. St. Louis had tied the game in the last 11 seconds of regular time with a crip shot by Center Ed Scott, knotting the score 41-41.

Kentucky was able to score only one point in the extra period, a free throw by seven-foot center Bill Spivey.

The Billikens duplicated a 1948 game when they dropped favored Kentucky from the Sugar Bowl tournament 42-40.

St. Louis Coach Ed Hickey's team played a slow deliberate game. They shot only when they had an open field.

Both teams battled on even terms through the first half.

Kentucky came back strong with its fast break offense to score 11 points in the first three minutes of the second half while St. Louis collected only three. This gave Kentucky a 33-25 lead.

Kentucky held onto this margin and lead with 10 minutes remaining in a thrilling game 37-29.

Minnesota Upsets Kansas in Tourney

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 29 (AP).—Fireman Myer (Whitey) Skoog led his Minnesota Gophers in a 62-51 upset over the Kansas Jayhawkers in a second-round game of the Big Seven basketball tournament tonight.

Bowling Green Beats Holy Cross, 68-67

CLEVELAND, Dec. 29 (AP).—Bowling Green nipped Holy Cross 68-67, in the second half of a basketball doubleheader before 6,842 fans at the arena.

It was the seventh straight victory for Bowling Green and avenged a one-point beating the Falcons took from Holy Cross here last season.

Pabst Company Adds $1000 to West Family Fund

The Pabst Blue Ribbon brewers yesterday announced a contribution of $1000 to the Sonny Boy West family fund.

They also said they were purchasing 100 ringside seats for the Percy Bassett-Red Top Davis fight, which heads the West benefit card at Uline Arena next Thursday.

Pabst sponsored the television of the ill-fated West-Bassett fight in New York last week.

Bassett, Philadelphia featherweight who has won 47 out of his 49 fights since turning pro three years ago, arrives here Sunday to complete training for his tenrounder against Davis.

Penn Wins Thriller

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 29 (AP).—A foul shot with 14 seconds to go gave University of Pennsylvania a 59-58 victory over Stanford tonight.

Colgate Whips UnbeatenNavy In Dixie Classic

RALEIGH, N. C., Dec. 29 (AP).—In a nip-and-tuck battle, Colgate's Red Raiders knocked Navy from the unbeaten ranks tonight, 63-59, and moved into the final round against North Carolina State in the Dixie Basketball Classic.

In earlier games today, North Carolina State swept to the finals by routing Wake Forest, 72-56; Tulane handed Rhode Island State an 81-62 defeat, and Duke turned back North Carolina, 71-63.

In the consolation bracket, tomorrow, Rhode Island State tangles with North Carolina at 2 p.m. and Tulane meets Duke at 3:30 for the consolation title.

Tomorrow night at 7:30, Wake Forest is pitted against Navy for third place and at 9 p.m. Colgate meets favored North Carolina State, defending champion, for the title.

Globetrotters Here Tonight

Basketball's leading comedy team, the Harlem Globetrotters, come to town tonight to duel the Boston Whirlwinds in the nightcap of a basketball doubleheader at Uline Arena.

The Trotters are famous for their wacky passing, dizzy shooting, and backhanded ball handling. The frantic antics apparently confuse the opposition. The Harlemites have won their first 38 games this season while attracting a bumper crop of 260,000 customers through the gates.

In the first game this evening, the New York Renaissance Clubmen meet the Philadelphia Sphas. The game begins at 7:45.

Pre-game and half-time entertainment will rival the game in interest. The Trotters have a pre-game warmup routine that smacks of old time vaudeville and between halves a hoop-rolling artist, a juggler, a unicyclist and other acts will run through their paces.

The Globetrotters will feature five veterans in Capt. Louis (Babe) Pressley, Reece (Goose) Tatum, Marques Haynes, Pop Gates and Ermer Robinson.

The Trotters also have Frank Washington, 6-4, former center of the Kansas City Stars, who has been called in to take the place of Nate (Sweetwater) Clifton.

McMillin Going To Kansas State?

TOPEKA, Kans., Dec. 29 (AP).—Stuart Dunbar, sports editor of the Topeka State Journal, said today that A. N. (Bo) McMillin will be named athletic director at Kansas State College within a few days.

McMillin, head football coach at the Manhattan school from 1928 through 1934 recently resigned as coach of the Detroit Lions.

Dunbar says McMillin's return to Kansas State will give the athletic department a "name personality" in response to demands by the school's alumni.

Gene Hairston Kayoes Ross In 3d Round

NEW YORK, Dec. 29 (AP).—Gene Hairston, sly rocketing middleweight contender, cut down J. T. Ross, San Jose, Calif., beanpole, to win by a knockout in 1:12 of the third round tonight at Madison Square Garden. Harrison weighed 158, Ross 162¾.

Ross, billed as the tallest middleweight at 6 foot 1½ inches, didn't have much else to recommend him. He went down once in the second round before Hairston belted him out with a sweeping right to the jaw.

Hairston sent Ross' mouthpiece slithering across the ring as he connected for the kayo wallop. The stringbean Ross went down on his back with a thump. Referee Mark Conn counted three and didn't bother to finish.

Dr. Vincent Nardiello, physician for the State Athletic Commission, examined Ross in the ring, but he recovered quickly and left the ring under his own power.

However, in the dressing room he seemed befuddled and underwent a second examination by Dr. Alexander Schiff, also of the commission staff.

"He has an ordinary kind of concussion," Schiff said, "but he seems to be all right." He recommended that Ross stop fighting for six months. Ross left later for his hotel.

Team Gets Blow, 5 Basketball Players Enlist

NEW YORK, Dec. 29 (AP).—Five member of a basketball team in North Brunswick Township, N. J., enlisted today in the Marines.

The five members of the Three Miles Runners who now are Marines are Charles and John Wilson, 20-year-old twins; Gerald Christensen, 20, and his brother, Kenneth, 18, and James Wilson, 20, not related to the twins. They were ordered to Parris Island, S. C., for basic training.

Coss, Rogers Lose in Tennis

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 29 (AP).—One upset featured today's early play in the annual Orange Bowl junior tennis tournament at Flamingo park.

Richard Holyrod, Miami, and Bob Green, West Palm Beach, defeated the second seeded doubles team of Tim Coss, Washington, D. C., and Ted Rogers, Chevy Chase, Md., 7—5, 6—0 in a third round junior doubles match.

Mixed doubles play for juniors (18 years old and younger) got underway with top-seeded Suzanne Herr, Miami Beach, and Jacque Grigry, Pasadena, Calif., having an easy time beating Patsy White, Miami Beach, and Andre Donnadieu, Mexico City, 6—0, 6—1.

Williams Upset

Garabito, Bickle, Jones Gain Fort Meade Finals

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

FORT MEADE, Md., Dec. 29.—All three defending champions, Bantamweight Pete Garabito, Lightweight Bob Bickle and Middleweight Lawrence Jones, got past the semifinals of the all-Army boxing tournament here tonight before a crowd of 1000, mostly soldiers.

However, for the second straight night, there was an upset in the light heavyweight division.

Alea Williams of the Fifth Army was the surprise victim on points, losing to Earl Churity of the Third Army, defending team champion.

The night before, it was Williams springing the upset, outpointing Sheridan Fagans, the 1948 and '49 champ. Tonight, the shorter Churity stayed away from rawboned Williams, jabbing stiffly with his left whenever Williams tried to move in. The decision was unanimous.

Lawrence Jones, a Washington D. C. lad, who has held his title for two years, was content to left jab and hook John Hanson off balance to earn a unanimous decision. Jones was fighting for the Third Army.

Garabito, former University of Maryland student, was the aggressor against Dave Melton, a Charlottesville, Va., lad, fighting ton was staggered several times and failed to lan da telling blow on Garabito.

Horsemen Vote to Strike At Tropical Park on Tuesday

By James F. Fowler

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 29 (AP).—The Florida Division of the Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association unanimously voted to strike against Tropical Park race track tonight, effective for Tuesday's program.

At the request of National HBPA President Dan Chappell the horsemen amended their original motion to begin the strike Monday and switched to the next day.

Chappell told the some 200 horsemen Monday—New Year's Day—is one of south Florida's biggest days of the year and it would be "a slap in the face" to the hundreds of State officials and thousands of visitors if Tropical Park was not allowed to run on Monday.

The horsemen also rejected a proposal by the track to create a three-member arbitration board. The board would have consisted of one HBPA representative, one track representative and one member to be selected by the two.

This proposal drew stormy comment from some of the members. Four members took the floor to suggest that the arbritration proposal be accepted, but the tenman executive committee and organization officers quickly beat down the speakers.

"Don't you think it will look bad for the HBPA if we reject Tropical's offer to mediate," an unidentified horseman asked.

"We have already met with Tropical officials and we haven't got anywhere," replied Vice President Howard O. Simmons.

Western Branch Wins Boys Club Title

Western Branch of the Police Boys' Club won the 80-pound championship of the Christmas tournament at the Eastern Branch gym, defeating Police Boys' Club No. 10, 36-30.

In other championship games, Merrick beat East Branch, 27-20, to win the 90-pound title, and Merrick defeated Club No. 10, 33-23, to win the 105-pound championship.

Gene Jones KOs Kohlbrecher in Third

BERLIN, Germany, Dec. 29 (AP).—Gene Jones, Negro heavyweight from Camden, N. J., knocked out Wilson Kohlbrecher of Berlin in the third round of their scheduled eight-round bout here today.

Ken Stribling, 169, Washington, D. C. won an eight-round decision over Willi Fazlau, 173, Germany, in another bout.

In Top Bowl Games

Michigan, Oklahoma, Texas, Clemson, Wyoming Favored

NEW YORK, Dec. 29 (AP).—Two-platoon football has become so popular that the gridiron sport has two seasons during each year—the scheduled program in the Fall and the bowl "season."

TODAY

EAST-WEST SHRINE game at San Francisco: The Eastern forces, with Everett Grandelius of Michigan State as the spear, are seven-point favorites to chalk up a fourth straight triumph. But the real winner will be the crippled kids in the various hospitals, who get the gate receipts after expenses have been paid. The East to win.

BLUE-GRAY at Montgomery, Ala.: Dan Foldberg and Chuck Shira, members of the unbeaten team that represented that grand old Southern school, the U. S. Military Academy, at West Point, N. Y., are members of the Dixie eleven. If the Southerners can defeat geography that easily why can't they beat the Northern football team? The South, suh, by seven.

ROSE BOWL at Pasadena: Michigan over California. Chuck Ortmann is completely recovered from injuries suffered during the season and it is doubtful if Les Richter, California All-America guard, and his playmates can handle the healthy Wolverine.

SUGAR BOWL, at New Orleans: Oklahoma over Kentucky; five Oklahomans are supposedly on the hospital list. They will get well, miraculously, by the time of kickoff and football's longest modern winning streak will move to 32 games.

COTTON BOWL, at Dallas: Texas over Tennessee. With Townsend in the backfield and McFadin on the line the Texas team is at least the equal of any team in the country. In addition, the Longhorns will be playing before the homefolks.

ORANGE BOWL, at Miami: Clemson over Miami. Injuries have forced Miami Coach Andy Gustafson to find a new quarterback and has him worried about his line. Clemson will give him even greater jitters.

CIGAR BOWL at Tampa, Fla.: Valparaiso over Lacrosse (Wis.) Teachers.

SUN BOWL at El Paso, Tex.: Cincinnati over West Texas State.

SALAD BOWL at Phoenix, Ariz.: Arizona State of Tempe over Miami of Ohio.

PINEAPPLE BOWL at Honolulu: Denver over Hawaii.

GW Coach Al Doran Has a Surprise in Store: His Basketball Captain Is Now in the Navy

WHEN BASKETBALL Coach Al Doran of George Washington High of Alexandria gets back to town from Raleigh, N. C., where he is attending the Dixie Basketball tournament, he will learn that he no longer has a captain for his team.

Warren (Smiley) Moore, the Generals sensational courtman, doesn't live here any more.

Four weeks ago, Moore and four budies, all athletes at GW High, enlisted in the Navy. Only thing is, Smiley neglected to tell his coach.

Yesterday his orders came and Moore, and his four friends were on their way to Great Lakes, Ill., to the Naval Training Center there ready for three months of rugged "boot" training.

Moore was captain of the team last year as well as this season. He made the first team of the Virginia All-State last year and was strongly favored to repeat. He scored 27 points in two games this season.

Another GW athlete with eligibility left who enlisted with Moore is Tackle Jim Reynolds. A regular on last season's football team, Reynolds is a junior who would be eligible for another season.

Three other prominent GW athletes are also on their way to Great Lakes with Moore.

They are: Lester Scott, a guard on the football team who was the Washington Post's Suburban Player of the Year in the recently completed season; Tom Pivone, a former baseball pitcher who was signed with the Washington Senators and assigned to their Emporia, Va., farm team; and George Nolan, who was the high scorer on the GW football team last fall. Nolan scored 66 points.

Wright Services Set For Tuesday

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Dec. 29 (AP).—The body of Warren Wright, 75, owner of the fabulous Calumet Farm thoroughbred racing stable, was enroute to Chicago tonight for funeral services and burial.

Wright died last night at his Winter home after a three weeks illness.

His wife, the former Miss Lucille Parker of Maysville, Ky., and their son, Warren, jr., were with him when he died of natural causes at 8:45 p. m. (EST).

The body is being sent by train to Chicago. Funeral services will be held at Rose Hill chapel Tuesday at 11 a. m., followed by burial in Rose Hill Cemetery.

Wright began building his turf empire in 1931 when he inherited the bulk of his father's 30 million dollars estate. The father, William Monroe Wright, founded the Calumet baking powder company in Chicago in 1888.

Horses Withdrawn

At the time of his death, Wright was master of the most successful racing and breeding thoroughbred farm in the history of the American turf.

Calumet horses scheduled to run at the opening of Santa Anita race track at Arcadia, Calif., today were withdrawn and much of the racing world was saddened by his passing.

The passing of the wealthy owner of the famed Calumet farm stable, a familiar personality at Santa Anita, led to the withdrawal of three Calumet hoses scheduled to race here today and forfeited the chance the stable had of winning the turf's top money winning crown for the fifth straight year.

"Plain Ben" Jones, the man who saddled some of Wright's greatest winners of the American turf, and his son, Jimmy, were shecked and grief-stricken by the death of their patron.

The elder Jones, now general manager of the Wright racing empire, ordered Bewitch and Wistful scratched from the day's feature race, the $15,000 Anita Chiquita purse, and Contribution was withdrawn from the preceding sixth race, all by permission of the track stewards.

Victory for either the favored Bewitch or Wistful in the Anita Chiquita would have sent Calumet's turf winnings past the current leader, the Brookmeade stable. The latter has won $664,224, and the Calumet silks have won $638,330.

Bundy Upsets Troopers, 63-61, For Rec Crown

Bundy Playground won a surprize upset victory over the Southeast Troopers, 63-61, in the finals of the 15-18 division of the Christmas Basketball Tournament held yesterday at Francis Recreation Center.

The outstanding player award for the division was presented to Eddie Harris of Bundy, while Francis Smith of Bundy won high point honors. He had 24 points in five games.

In other contests, the Southeast Jets defeated the Courtmasters, 34-11, while the Trooperettes won from the Francis Whizzettes, 28-25. Joe Wilson of the Jets won both the high-point and outstanding player awards. Wilson scored 32 points in three games.

Boys YMCA Wallops Montgomery 'Y,' 103-23

The Boys' YMCA basketball team defeated Montgomery YMCA, 103-23, yesterday as the fourth annual Youth Day at the Boys "Y."

Sedgman, McGregor Win

ADELAIDE, Australia, Dec. 29 (AP).—Frank Sedgman and Ken McGregor won the South Australian Doubles Tennis championship today, defeating Mervyn Rose and Don Candy, 6-3, 4-6, 6-2, 6-4, in an all-Australian final.

They Pay Off $58, $11.80 In Features

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

CHARLES TOWN, Dec. 29.—I'm not trying to make a Federal case of it, but Mi Scandal and Petty Larceny won the two chief races on the Friday program.

Mi Scandal, a son of Court Scandal owned by Mrs. J. B. Hatfield, took the Whitehall Purse, today's feature by a neck margin in a three-way show with R. M. Downes' San-Chu second and J. O. Hewgley's Alschol third.

Petty Larceny, out of the mare Spare Change and in the colors of the Beaudet Stable, accounted for the Holton purse, the secondary feature. Mrs. Albert Wolfe's Empty Pockets was second with B. A. Hall, sr.'s, Bee A. H., 3d.

Foul Claim Not Allowed

Empty Pockets was beaten a head and then failed to get a disqualification of the winner on a foul claim by Jockey Granny Wolfe who accused Jockey George Cardoza of carrying him out entering the stretch.

Mi Scandal, with Alschol installed as the favorite in the field of eight, paid an $11.80 mutuel and was clocked in 1:27 1/5 for the about seven furlongs over a fast track.

Petty Larceny was the longest shot in the field of eight in the fifth event and he returned a $58.60 mutuel after going the same distance in 1:25 4/5. Cardoza took the filly to the front at the start and simply stayed there.

Bush Wins The Double

Jockey Vernon Bush, leading rider at the meeting, made the $44 payoff on the daily double of 1 and 4 a personal proposition. He won the day's opener in a gallop, leading throughout with Mrs. D. S. Winchester's Passing Parade which paid a mere $3.60 mutuel.

Bush came back in the second race to bring Joe McGann's Picanny home from behind, after giving the nine-year-old a rousing stretch ride. Individual backers of Picanny collected a $14.40 mutuel.

Apprentice Jockey Darrell Hartley, injured in a training accident early yesterday, was not as seriously hurt as originally reported. X-rays showed no broken facial bones. He escaped with a severe bruise that has his left eye shut as tight as a padlocked bookie joint.

DiChiacchio Scores 33 for St. Martin's

Tony DiChiacchio of St. Martin's set a tournament record yesterday in leading his team to a 76-33 victory over the Campus School in the CYO basketball tournament at St. John's. Tony scored 33 points.

In other games, Holy Name defeated St. Anthony's, 29-21, St. Gabriel's won over Blessed Sacrament, 60-25, and St. Joseph's beat St. Ann's, 23-19.

JUSTICE TRIUMPHS—District Court Judge Edward Curran has a big hug for four members of the Chevy Chase Bombers basketball team which yesterday defeated Jefferson for the girls championship in the Recreation Department's Christmas tourney. Bill Bennings Says:

AT CHARLES TOWN.

DEAR FOLKS:

The big black dog, who is mascot of the paddock and betting ring, may not be the best bred animal hereabouts—they call him United Nations—but he is far from the dumbest. He spends most of the afternoon begging hot dogs from winning bettors or harassing the hot lunch chef. Perhaps the dog knows the meeting is waning. At any rate he appeared before the first race with a paper bag in his mouth apparently for the purpose of carrying away a few snacks for the hard times to come. Maybe he's like the rest of us and hopes to get even on the Saturday program. Racing Secretary Fred Burton has whipped up a nice show. The sun came out yseterday, higher temperatures helped make the roads shipshape, so it looks like a big final day. See you on the rail—Bill.

One On the Aisle

The Angel Clifton Grovels in Whimsy

By Richard L. Coe

CLIFTON WEBB is an angel on earthbound assignment to help Gigi Perreau get born because her parents-elect are very busy people of the theater, too busy being successful to get around to Gigi.

This, so help me, occurs in something called "For Heaven's Sake," at the Palace.

Gigi's assignment demands that she play a little girl of 7 who hasn't been born yet; she's 7 because her parents have been married eight years, that is she would have been 7 if. The parents, Robert Cummings, a violently successful playwright, and Joan Bennett, a violently successful actress, have loved each other and their public to death, but you know how things can get when you're busy—you think only of yourself and as for taking the time to have a child, well, don't be foolish.

So, Clifton Webb is sent from heaven to try to give Gigi a little help in breaking into earthly form, and another angel, Edmund Gwenn, is on hand to see that Webb doesn't get lazy. As a sort of sub-plot, Gwenn is introduced by Gigi, who certainly gets around, to a little boy her own age who hasn't been born yet, either.

This little semi-lad, I suppose you'd call him, has picked out for HIS father an UNSUCCESSFUL writer who sits around on park benches waiting for Inspiration, eventually provided by Gwenn, who tells him an absolutely wonderful yarn that quickly becomes a best seller, so that means the Unsuccessful Writer can now afford to become a father. The which he does in the same hospital at the same hour Robert Cummings is in the waiting room about to become a father and naturally they get together on dramatizing the best-seller and it should be perfectly clear to absolutely the dimmest mind that by the time they hit 18, Gigi and her patient, unborn pal will be That Way.

Clifton's assignment is more complex than Gwenn's because, after all, he's dealing with successful people. Although they've had a row of hits, Cummings and Bennett don't seem to command a bit of respect from potential investors, so they need backing. That's where Clifton gets the idea of becoming a rich mortal from Texas after drifting into a Gary Cooper movie.

So Clifton goes around acting all gawky and shylike, having to bash Jack La Rue, who has somehow drifted in as himself, on the floor, and try to fight off the advances of Joan Blondell, a predatory Hollywood writer. This leads Clifton to do all manner of unangelic things and lose his heavenly rating just at a time when the tax authorities and a couple of psychiatrists think he's either a tax evader or a looney.

But good intentions persevere and, as I've said, Gigi does get born. This may have occured because Clifton worked hard in the country, demanding all sorts of idyllic, perfume-laden breezes from an obliging heaven, or in town after Joan and Robert decide they do like each other very much. In both these sequences the throbbing of Tschaikovsky's Sixth Symphony pounds through the sound track, providing what is, I imagine, the most outrageous violation of the spirit if not the letter of the Industry's proud Production Code yet unleashed on a confused public.

If you think I'm making all this up, you just don't realize that Harry Segal, who cooked this, can't forget the fact that he also once wrote "Here Comes Mr. Jordan." And if you insist on checking my facts, be sure to bring your own mop and pail.

"FOR HEAVEN'S SAKE." 20th Century-Fox release produced by William Perlberg. Directed and written by George Seaton from a play by Harry Segall. Photographed by Lloyd Ahern. At the Palace.

44-Hour Week Ordered At State Department For Information Unit

The State Dep't yesterday placed its international information employes on a 5½ day, 44-hour week as other defense agencies considered a similar step.

A meeting of Federal officials is to be held Tuesday to draft a Government-wide policy on longer working hours. The Civil Service Commission is heading the study at the direction of the White House.

About 1600 State employes will start the 44-hour week next week. They will work 4 hours Saturday mornings hereafter. Approximately 750 of them are here; the remainder in New York City. All State employes may be placed on a lengthened work week after a uniform policy is fixed.

Dr. H. L. Dryden, director of the Nat'l Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, told the Senate Appropriations Committee that his agency may soon place many of its employes on a longer work week in response to this observation by Senator Maybank (D., S. C.):

"I am just thinking out loud that we cannot go around here in a state of emergency working a 40-hour week because we are wasting so many people." To which Dryden responded:

"We have been thinking the same way. We made the estimates on the 40-hour week, but if we get more money, we hope by discussions with the Budget Bureau we can use that for overtime work as soon as authorized. The manpower might not go up."

Dryden, however, questioned the present system of overtime pay by which many classified employes get less than straight time for the extra work.

STORY: A light burned out in the office of a VERY security-conscious defense official. His secretary called the repair man to replace the bulb. She instructed him to enter through the outer office so she could keep an eye on on him. Instead, he unlocked the door to the inner office with a master key, and the secretary dashed in, demanding an explanation.

"Calm down; it's all right," he replied, "I'm from the Potomac Energy Commission."

VA.: Its junior legal members in the disability insurance claims services have appealed to Civil Service for allocation of their jobs from grade 10 to 11.

Similar employes in VA's regional offices are grade 11s. The attorneys at headquarters here not only must review the work of the regional attorneys, but they are also required to handle more difficult cases. Yet their jobs have lower classifications. VA is supporting the employe appeals.

COMMERCE: The squeeze is on in the Commerce Building. Employes will be doubled up in its offices to make room for several hundred new employes of the National Production Authority.

CIVIL SERVICE: Robert Goodwin, director of Labor's Bureau of Employment Security, is the latest person rumored to be considered for appointment as chairman of the Civil Service Commission. . . . A new Civil Service order requires the transfer along with a Federal employe of his official personnel folder. The employing agency must request the file which must be released promptly by the losing agency.

FTEC: J. Earl Cox of Civil Aeornautics Board, has been elected president of the Federal Trial Examiners Conference. Other officials are: Tobias Naftalin of ICC, vice president; Elizabeth C. Smith of FCC, treasurer, and Jack Bain of Agriculture, treasurer

ROUND-UP: Charles Stevenson, deputy commissioner of Customs, is retiring after 51 years of Federal service. He entered Government service as a special delivery messenger. He will receive Treasury's award for long and distinguished service . . . Richard W. Holderson, another successful career civil servant who started out as a messenger, is retiring as administrative assistant at the Naval Gun Factory after 40 years of service. . . The VA Center at Martinsburg, W. Va., has openings for dieticians, x-ray technicians, and therapist instructors, $2875 to $3100 annually to start.

Rep. Teague Calls Capitol Meeting To Hear Fondahl, Hayes on Funds

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

A House District subcommittee will seek Monday to "sell a reluctant House Appropriations Committee on voting District civil defense funds without further delay.

Representative Olin Teague (D., Tex.) called a public meeting for 10 a. m. Monday to hear John E. Fondahl, acting District civil defense director, and Thomas J. Hayes, 2d, assistant engineer commissioner.

Teague, author of the last-ditch move, acted in his capacity as chairman of the House District Committee's special civil defense "watchdog" group.

House Refused Funds

Two weeks ago the House took the cue from its Appropriations Committee and refused to grant a penny of the Commissioners' request for $337,500 to take local civil defense out of the planning stage. The Senate voted the full amount, with a showdown due in a Senate-House conference committee meeting Monday or Tuesday. The local item is carried in the 20-million-dollar supplemental defense bill.

"Something more than paper plans must get underway in the Capital City—and right away," Teague said last night.

"The country is looking to Washington for leadership in civil defense. We cannot sit by any longer," he added. "I hope our meeting will help to sell the committee on the urgency of appropriating some funds without delay."

Might Get $180,000

One observer guessed conferees might settle on a $180,000 civil defense fund for Washington. A large portion of the requested money would be used to establish a citywide air-raid warning system.

Teague told reporters he and others on his subcommittee would lead a floor fight for preparedness money, should they fail to convince their colleagues on the House Appropriations subcommittee.

Meanwhile Senator Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.) said he would sponsor a bill next year to create a congressional watchdog committee on civil defense activities.

To Prevent "Abuses"

Chief purpose of such a committee, he said, would be to prevent any "abuses" of the sweeping peacetime powers granted the Federal Civil Defense Director under nationwide civil defense legislation.

The House and Senate are expected to complete action on the national bill Monday and Tuesday.

Virginia Sees Problem In D. C. Evacuees

FREDERICKSBURG, Va., Dec. 29.—Civil defense leaders here, beginning formation of a full-scale defense organization, picture this community of 15,000 as an evacuation center for a huge number of evacuees in the event that Washington ever is subjected to a severe bombing attack.

Mayor C. M. Cowan, director of civil defense here, told members of City Council yesterday that the defense organization is "just beginning to snowball and, as far as we understand, will continue for the rest of our lives."

Local defense units will include mobile groups designed for emergency assignment to such key points as Washington and Norfolk.

A call for 200 auxiliary firemen and policemen already has been issued.

Surveyor Washington Slipped—But Not Much

Fumes Blamed

Marylander Dies as He Works on Car

A 34-year-old Navy Department electronics engineer—apparently overcome by fumes while trying to fix the heater of his car—was accidentally killed by carbon monoxide yesterday.

Mr. Stickle

The body of Charles W. Stickle, a former metropolitan policeman, was found by a neighbor on the front seat of his car in a garage built adjacent to his home at 2705 Belleview ave., Cheverly, Md., according to Dr. John T. Maloney, Prince Georges County medical examiner.

He was dressed in old clothes, Dr. Maloney said, and tools were lying on the floor. Dr. Maloney said he had evidently been trying to fix a faulty heater switch.

The medical examiner said Stickle's wife awoke about 10 a. m. yesterday in an upstairs bedroom to find the house full of fumes. She ran from the house and summoned a neighbor, Mrs. James T. Pumphry, of 2703 Belleview ave., and an unidentified workman.

Mrs. Pumphry found the body in the garage. A daughter, Mary Ann, 15, who also was sleeping in the house at the time, was unharmed.

Dr. Maloney issued a certificate of accidental death due to carbon monoxide poisoning.

Fire at Schuttig Plant Shows No Sabotage Proof

Investigation by the Fire Marshal's office and the FBI yesterday turned up no evidence of sabotage in the fire which heavily damaged the plant of Shuttig & Co., Inc., manufacturers of aircraft electronics equipment, at 9th and Kearney sts. ne. Thursday night, officials said.

Deputy Fire Marshal Roy A. Warfield said the cause of the fire has not been determined. His investigation will continue.

He said the damage to the plant, which was operating under Government contract, ran to approximately $100,000. Earlier estimates has placed it at possibly more than $250,000.

Few Spending New Year's Out of Town

Sale of Liquor To Be Permitted After 12 Till 2

New Year comes but once a year, but by last night Washington area residents were preparing to turn it into a three-day celebration.

Early indications were that most Washingtonians planned to spend their second long holiday weekend in or near home.

Airport, railway and bus officials reported traffic higher than a normal Friday but nowhere near the Christmas peak of a week ago.

The American Automobile Association said it had received numerous requests for trip information but that most queries were for the best routes to Philadelphia and New York.

The Weather Bureau said the sky will be overcast today but that weather generally will be good over the holiday.

In addition to regular services Sunday, churches have scheduled special midnight watch services to greet the New Year. Masses will be held in Catholic churches and most other churches will be open.

Night clubs will be allowed to serve drinks after midnight until 2 a.m. Monday. Before midnight Sunday only beer and light wines will be permitted.

Capital Transit said it will provide extra late service on a majority of lines on New Year's Day to accommodate riders attending midnight church services, late movie shows and other events. Sunday schedules will prevail later in the day.

The Public Library will close down for New Year's Day.

Central Branch, YMCA, 1736 G st. nw., will hold its annual New Year's Day open house Monday from 2 to 10 p.m. Events include a tea dance, roller-skating exhibition, and a program by the Washington Scottish Bag Pipe Band and Highland Dancers.

Man Found Dead, Woman Wounded In Dual Shooting

A cab driver died and a woman was shot last night in what police termed an attempted murder and suicide.

The dead man, who police reported shot himself in the temple, was Nick Scales, 37, of 905 Kent pl. ne.

At Emergency Hospital was his common-law wife, Cora Sherman, 42, of 1333 Belmont st. nw., an Interior Department clerk, with a bullet wound in her cheek. Scales, it was reported, used a .32 caliber pistol to fire both shots.

Police said the double shooting took place at 9 p. m. at the Belmont st. address after the couple had an argument. The couple separated six weeks ago after a quarrel, but Scales returned to Belmont st. last night according to the police.

House Is Rezoned In Montgomery

A permit to operate a three-apartment project in an area zoned for one-family homes has been granted by the Montgomery County Board of Zoning Appeals.

The board granted Mrs. Margaret Walsh Nagle, 6622 Broad st., Brookmont, Md., a variance to permit use of the apartments. It was reported that none of her neighbors objected and that she had bought the apartment house in good faith from a previous owner who had been given county permits to install the apartments The apartments have been in operation since 1940.

The County Council previously had refused to rezone the property to permit apartment use.

Review Classes Considered For Former County Teachers

Review classes for former teachers who wish to return to the profession may be held in Montgomery County.

Dr. Edwin W. Broome, superintendent of county schools, said approximately 200 new teachers will be needed for the 1951-52 school year and recruitment apparently will be difficult because of defense needs and the small graduating classes scheduled for normal schools this June.

The review classes would be provided to permit former teachers to brush up on their techniques and obtain teaching jobs in the county system.

The board of education has approved contracts for three new school projects: an 8-classroom, all purpose room, library and kitchen addition to East Rockville Elementary School, to cost $183,000, awarded to Kamp & Heck Co., Bethesda; Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School gymnasium, to cost $239,115, awarded to A. C. Minnix & Son, Washington; a 6-classroom, all-purpose room, library and kitchen addition to Viers Mill Village Elementary School, to cost $184,000, awarded to H. O. McAlister Co. of Washington.

Modern Check of Surveying By Washington Supports Him

survey of the southwest line, which divides Arlington from Fairfax County.

Wigglesworth minimizes the Washington error. "Why," he said, "Washington's surveys were better than some of our more modern work."

Washington, it seems, had "nothing in the world to work with but a compass set on a wooden stand with peepsights," the Twentieth Century surveyor pointed out.

Today, Wigglesworth's men work with "high-grade transits with telescopes" worth from $400 to $600.

"Frankly, I think Washington did a wonderful job," Wigglesworth said, "considering what he had to work with."

General Washington made his District boundary line surveys in 1791 and 1792, according to record books. In the process, he placed 40 of the inscribed "boundary stones" along the line. Then, in 1846, the Arlington corner of the Federal City was given back to Virginia. Only the stones remain.

"And a good thing," too," Wigglesworth said. "If those stones were lost, we wouldn't have had a starting point for our own county lines. We'd be lost."

Arlington's resurvey of the line actually was launched to clear up a slight disagreement over who should put up a stop sign at Wilson blvd. and N. McKinley rd.

The state said the sign point lay in Arlington and said it was the county's problem. Arlington said it was in Fairfax County, where the State of Virginia is responsible for the signs.

Wigglesworth's survey puts it squarely in Fairfax County.

More recently, two families with homes near S. Chesterfield rd. and Leesburg pike—along the same boundary line—said they lived in Fairfax. They claimed immunity from Arlington charges of keeping unsanitary outhouses and trash-littered yards.

But Wigglesworth's survey brought them into Arlington County Court as bona fide county residents. A decision in the case still is pending.

Said Wigglesworth, with a sigh: "If it hadn't been for Washington . . ."

District Slum Agency Holds First Meeting

The District Redevelopment Land Agency held its first meeting yesterday with John R. Searles jr., recently-appointed Executive Director.

Business of the District building session was previously announced routine, according to Chairman Mark Lansburgh.

The group approved a contract in which the Housing and Home Finance Agency will turn over $170,000 to the hitherto penniless redevelopment setup for preparation of slum clearance blueprints.

The agency will transfer about $28,000 of the full amount to the National Capital Park and Planning Commission which actually will draft the redevelopment blueprints.

Searles' and his staff hope to operate in rent-free quarters in the District Public Library.

Man Accused As 'Stocking Cap' Robber

John Farrar, 23, of 1140 Bladensburg rd. ne., was arraigned yesterday before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence on two charges of robbery and one of attempted robbery.

Lawrence ordered him held under $7500 bond and continued the cases to January 11.

Farrar was arrested at his home Friday after Thomas Lyon, 47, a cab driver, of 518 7th st. se., reported he had been robbed of $4.80 in front of Farrar's home. Lyon identified Farrar as a passenger he had driven there. He said Farrar left the car to get some change and a few minutes later a man, masked in a black stocking cap, came out of Farrar's home and robbed him.

Farrar also was identified as one of two men who demanded money from Mrs. Ida Gordon in her grocery store at 1346 Constitution ave ne., last Saturday. The two men left when she told them to get out.

In addition, Farrar was identified as one of the same pair who entered the grocery store of Sydney Tager, 41, at 1400 Constitution ave. ne., a few minutes later with a similar demand for money. The two left after settling with Tager for $5, police said.

Farrar's companion has not yet been apprehended, police said.

Gallinger Hospital Services Found Improved During Year

Gallinger Hospital provided the District's indigent sick and injured with improved service in the year just ending, but it needs more funds to carry on in 1951.

This is brought out in the annual review of hospital activities released yesterday by Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, District Director of Public Health.

During 1950 fewer patients were admitted to Gallinger and Upshur Street Hospital than in 1949. The total admission for the past 12 months was 23,871, a drop of 941 patients from 1949's total.

Success of Clinic

A major factor in cutting down the number of patients was the success of the Evening Medical Clinic at the Southwest Health Center, Dr. Seckinger said. The clinic has just completed its first full calendar year of operation.

The project has demonstrated the value of medical care on an ambulatory basis; has saved the District thousands of dollars, and "pointedly demonstrates the need for an adequate out-patient clinic at Gallinger Hospital," Dr. Seckinger said.

More than 600 chronically ill patients unable to pay for their own care were treated at the clinic this month. All of them at one time were hospitalized at Gallinger at public expense.

Laboratory was Built

A new laboratory building was completed at Gallinger during the year and will be ready for complete operation early in 1951.

The hospital's new pediatrics and crippled children's building is to be ready for occupancy in the spring, but funds are still needed for personnel to staff it.

During the year, the x-ray department added two part-time roentgenologists and three full-time technicians.

"With the new equipment and added personnel, the service has improved markedly during the past year," Dr. Seckinger said.

A department of physical medicine was instituted during the year with a staff loaned by the United States Public Health Service's office of vocational rehabilitation. Dr. Seckinger found early results of the new service "amazing."

They were arrested on a warrant sworn to by a friend of Cooper's. The results of the investigation have not been made public.

400 Auxiliary Police Sought In Alexandria

Alexandria defense officials have issued a call for 400 able-bodied men to serve as auxiliary policemen for future emergency service.

William M. Barbour, local civilian defense coordinator, said yesterday the number of desired auxiliaries was established by a directive from Gov. John S. Battle, who suggested that each city have five emergency patrolmen for every regular policeman on its force. Alexandria currently has a force of 86 men and officers.

Barbour said defense officials are seeking men over 21 years old, but have set no maximum age limit. "As long as they're able to get around, we'd like to have them register," he said.

According to present plans, the auxiliaries will be trained in first aid, traffic control and other subjects designated by the area's defense council. Lieut. George F. Everly, of the police department, has been assigned the job of mapping out a training program for the emergency force.

Volunteers may register at any time of day or night at the city police headquarters, Barbour announced.

To help the recruitment program, police officials are examining the roster of the estimated 300 men who served as auxiliaries in World War II, Barbour said. If they still live in the city and are not engaged in actual military service, they will be asked to join up, he explained.

Rhode Island Police Catch Remaining 3 Va. Escapees

Two Recaptured After Wild Chase And Auto Crash; Other Taken Easily

The remaining three convicts of the four who escaped from a Virginia State prison camp at Culpeper early Wednesday were caught yesterday by police in East Providence, R. I.

Two of the men, police said, were captured after their stolen automobile crashed over a seawall during a chase by a police squad car, the Associated Press reported. Their companion was arrested a short time later as he emerged from a cleaning plant with a suit and two sport shirts under his arm.

Arrested as the result of the auto chase were by Roy Edward Kelly, 22, of Wise County, Va., and Orvil Richards, 28, of Baltimore. Both suffered cuts and bruises when their car went over the seawall and overturned.

Raymond J. Blais, 26, formerly of Pawtucket, R. I., was picked up outside the cleaning plant by East Providence police.

The hunt for the fugitives, started around 2 a. m. when police found an abandoned automobile in South Attleboro. It contained burglar tools and clothing believed to be stolen.

Shortly afterwards, police said, an East Providence police car began pursuit of a speeding automobile occupied by Kelly and Richards. The chase, which reached speeds of 85 miles an hour at times, ended when the convicts' auto hit the seawall at Bullock's Point, flipped over the wall and landed on the beach just short of the water line.

Police, alerted for the convicts by a 13-State teletype, arrested Blais a few hours later.

The quartet broke away from the Culpeper prison camp after cutting their way out of a cell block with a hacksaw. They overpowered a guard and escaped from the main prison building by using an improvised skeleton key. The fourth prisoner was recaptured a few hours later about six miles from the camp.

Capital Transit Nets $645,228 In 11 Months

By S. Oliver Goodman

Capital Transit Co. yesterday reported November net income of $108,102, a sharp increase of $59,760 over the same 1949 period.

This brought net for the first 11 months of 1950 to $645,228, virtually the same as the $647,226 in the corresponding period last year. The net for the 11 months was equivalent to $2.73 a share. With one month still to go, earnings for the year are expected amply to cover the $3 a share dividend paid or declared for this year.

Operating revenues for the 11 months totaled $24,991,136, a dip of $775,990. Operating expenses of $19,525,992 were down $1,149,418.

Revenue passengers showed a continued decline in November and the 11-month period. The cumulative total through November was 250,759,485, off 11.2 percent from the year-age figure.

Efforts to economize were reflected in the reduction of 6.4 percent in bus and car miles.

Deb Parties Give Gala Send-Off to Old 1950

By Elizabeth Maguire

WITH A SHORT TIME left to go, the Old Year all but spent itself yesterday in a whirl of parties. And everybody was in the whirl, it seemed, saying hail and farewell to 1950.

Separate cocktail gatherings and dinner parties later combined in one gala group at the dance given for Miss Sarah Daingerfield Zantzinger. The debutante was presented by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Chew Zantzinger, at the Chevy Chase Club. Sidney's orchestra played, and the ballroom was gayly decked with Christmas greens.

A REPEAT request at the dance was a song written by Sidney for the debutante, who, judging by the song is fond of riding. The tune was catchy and the words ran "Sallie, Sallie, won't you please get off your horse and dance the Charleston with me."

THE BUD was gowned for her debut in white nylon net, strapless and bouffant. A spray of sequins edged the bodice and fell in a paneled swirl down the front. In the same frock Miss Zantzinger attended the Bachelor's Cotillion in Baltimore December 4, and the autumn ball at Tuxedo in October. Her flowers last evening were a spray of shell pink camellias, sent by her uncle, Otway Zantzinger.

The debutante's mother was gowned in orchid pink satin, fashioned with square neck and small train. Before the dance, Mrs. Benjamin Hill, jr., sister of Mrs. Zantzinger, gave a dinner party at the Chevy Chase Club for some 50 young people, including Baltimore debutantes, and classmates of Sally, from Miss Zantzinger was graduated out of town.
last June from Chatham Hall, Va., and is now in her first year at Bryn Mawr.

HAPPILY CROWDING the hours between 5 and 7 yesterday were the debuts of three other Washington girls. Miss Nancy Joyce Dickey, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Joseph Kingsley Dickey, was presented at a tea at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lester Marlatt. Miss Rose Antoinette Caudle, daughter of Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Theron Lamar Caudle, made her bow at a tea dance at the Sulgrave Club, and Miss Sara Norfleet Dickinson was introduced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eldred Given Dickinson.

Miss Dickey, who was graduated from Dobbs Ferry and is now at Vassar, wore a cream colored silk organdy shot with gold thread for her debut. Her flowers were a spray of yellow roses. Her mother wore blue lace with white orchids, and her grandmother was in dark green lace with lavender orchids.

GREAT-AUNTS of the debutante, Mrs. William Bell Watkins and Mrs. Karl Boy-Ed, both of Berryville, Va., assisted at pouring tea. Mrs. Dorothy M. Reid, who is Mrs. Dickey's sister, and Mrs. Edward Russell also poured. Mrs. Watkins, Mrs. Boy-Ed and Mrs. Marlott are daughters of the late Bishop Alexander Mackay-Smith of Pennsylvania, who at one time was rector of St. John's Church on Lafayette Square.

Miss Rose Antoinette Caudle made her bow in a gown of silver lace with little petals of nylon sewn in the bodice and 30 yards of material in the skirt. Her nosegay, made of white rosebuds and blue forget-me-nots, was a gift of Mrs. Frace Stewart, executive assistant to the Attorney General.

MRS. CAUDLE'S canasta club made up the list of assistants at the party. Arriving promptly at 5 with their husbands to start off the dancing were Mrs. Tom C. Clark, Mrs. Leslie Biffle, Mrs. Curtis Shears, Mrs. Paul A. Porter, Mrs. Dale Miller, Mrs. Gale Pugh, Mrs. John Snyder, Mrs. Spencer Love, Mrs. J. Carrol Cone and Mrs. Stewart.

Mrs. Caudle wore a two-piece dinner gown of dusty rose crepe, pinned with orchids at the shoulder. Relatives attending the party included Mrs. Caudle's mother, Mrs. Alfred Monsalvatge of Augusta, Ga., and Mrs. Caudle's brother, Alfred Monsalvatge, jr., also of Augusta. Mrs. James M. Covington, jr., of Wadesboro, N. C., aunt of the debutante, and Mrs. Stancil M. Smith of Washington, sister-in-law of Mrs. Caudle, also attended.

BARNEE - LOWE'S orchestra provided continuous dance music, with Barnee at the piano. A floor committee, headed by the debutante's brother, Thomas Alfred Caudle, included William Bronley Ammon, jr., Thomas Bradley, Holden Clark, Robert W. Crichlow, 3rd, George Hale, W. Pinkney Jones, Thomas Owen and John Berry Wallace.

THE CHARMING old colonial rooms of Dumbarton House were thronged with young people attending the tea dance debut of Miss Sara Norfleet Dickinson. Erwin Devron's orchestra furnished the music for dancing in a ballroom decorated with holly and poinsettias.

Miss Dickinson was gowned in bouffant white tulle fashioned with white satin bodice and tulle stole. She carried red roses and her pearls were her great grandmother's. Mrs. Dickinson was in black velvet, floor-length, with deep boat-shaped neck line and corsage of gardenias at the shoulder.

MR. AND MRS. Eldred Pendleton Dickinson, grandparents of the debutante, and Mr. and Mrs. James Richard Heiskell, and Mr. and Mrs. James Freeland Dunlop, jr., her uncles and aunts, attended the party. The debutante is a member of an old Georgetown family. Her great great grandfather, Robert Peter, was the first mayor of Georgetown, and she is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Freeland Dunlop of Woodburn, Leesburg, Va.

Assisting Mrs. Dickinson yesterday were Mrs. Smith Blair, Mrs. Richard Potts of Frederick, Md., Mrs. James Patten, Mrs. William C. Kern, Mrs. Detlow Marthinson, Mrs. Warren Stephenson, Mrs. Heiskell, Mrs. Oliver Walker, Mrs. Dunlop and Mrs. William Laird Dunlop 3d.

Miss Katherine Sherman, Miss Sally Alexander, Miss Joan Lyons, and Miss Betsy Walker assisted the debutante.

COL. AND MRS. HORACE BENJAMIN SMITH gave a cocktail party yesterday for Capt. and Mrs. James Kirwin Sullivan, who were married December 14. Mrs. Sullivan is Mrs. Smith's daughter, the former Virginia Summerlin.

Yesterday's party was for older friends of the Smiths, and today a similar party will be given for friends of the bride and bridegroom. Capt. and Mrs. Sullivan have bought a house on 31st st. near Woodland dr., not far from Colonel and Mrs. Smith.

MRS. WADE HAISLIP entertained at luncheon yesterday at Fort Myer for Miss Eleanor Tydings, debutante daughter of Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings. A group of other debutantes of the season were guests, and also sub-deb Miss Carol Haines, a student at Holton-Arms, whose parents, Col. and Mrs. Owen Haines are in Paris.

Tydings. Last season Miss Morgenstierne made her bow at a tea at the embassy.

MISS GRAYSON BEACH, another debutante of the season, was honored at a dinner given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel F. Beach, at the Sulgrave Club. The dinner was for some 50 young people and a few older friends of Mr. and Mrs. Beach.

Friends of the debutante were seated in the ballroom at a U-shaped table, centered with white pom-poms and red berries. Mr. and Mrs. Beach dined with their friends in the adjoining card room. Erwin Devron played his accordion with an accompanying guitarist, providing dance music between courses.

Another dinner before the dance last evening was given by Mr. and Mrs. Albert Walker in honor of Miss Virginia Wetherill, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Wetherill 3rd.

A DIPLOMATIC dinner also held the spotlight last evening. Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Edward G. Miller jr., gave a dinner at their home for the Ambassador of Chile and Senora de Nieto del Rio.

State Groups Will Welcome 1951 Silently

By Nicha Searle

IT'S UNBELIEVABLE but true! None of the partying State societies has an event slated for New Year's Eve.

But that won't keep the State society people home on the galaest night of the year. They've been invited to Dave McWilliams' fifth annual New Year's Eve party in the main ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel. Dancing will be from 9:30 p. m. to 1:30 a. m. with plenty of noisemakers and novelties to get folks in the spirit. And it will be up to the party-goers whether they will go formal or informal.

ONE GROUP which will celebrate New Year's a little early is the West Virginia State Society.

The Mountaineer-State dance tonight will not be limited to its membership. It will be held in the large ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel from 9 p. m. to 1 a. m.

Newly elected officers of the society will be installed at this dance. They are A. Willis Kemper, president; Chester Barrows, financial secretary, with his wife Mrs. Pearl Roberta Barrows as financial secretary, and Mrs. Frances W. Smeltzer, secretary.

ON THE FOLLOWING Saturday, January 6, two State groups have planned parties.

Georgia State Society will hold its first party of the year in the West ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel at 9:30 p. m. On the evening's program will be dancing to the music of Dave McWilliams' orchestra as well as bridge and canasta for those who prefer.

Mrs. Robert Ramspeck, president of the society, will receive the guests with other officers of the Georgia group.

ON THE SAME night the Nebraska State Society has slated its Congressional dance. The first activity of the Nebraskans in 1951 will be held in the Burgundy room of the Wardman Park Hotel from 9:30 p. m. to 1 a. m.

Dancing will be to Jack Morton's orchestra and tables will be available for society members who wish to play cards. The party will also be a chance to meet, or to renew acquaintance, with the Nebraska congressional delegation.

The Nebraska Society has announced that it will again publish its popular "Who's Who of Nebraskans in Washington." This handy little booklet lists the names, Washington addresses and telephone numbers, as well as Nebraska home towns, of all the members of the society.

Lieut. Col. Denver W. Wilson has been elected vice president of the Nebraska Society by the Board of Governors.

THE COLORADO State Society has issued invitations for a reception and dance to be held January 12 in the Burgundy Room of the Wardman Park Hotel.

The dance, which begins at 9 p. m., will honor the Colorado Congressional delegation. Music will be furnished by T. Donally James and his orchestra.

SEEING that the play at the Gayety, "Apple of His Eye," has an Indiana farm setting, plus an Indiana author—Kenyon Nicholson, plus an Indiana set designer, Robert O'Hern—the Indiana State Society will be there to view it Wednesday. The day has been designated a "Hoosier honor day."

Anne Diffenderfer Is Married to Thomas Dougherty

MRS. THOMAS J. DOUGHERTY (Southall)
. . . married in ivory velveteen

MISS ANNE LENOIR DIFFENDERFER, daughter of Mrs. William Irving Diffenderfer and the late Mr. Diffenderfer of Washington, became the bride yesterday evening of Thomas James Dougherty, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Dougherty of Park River, N. D. The 8:30 p. m. ceremony took place in Douglas Memorial Methodist Church, where the bride's family has worshiped for four generations. Dr. Frank Y. Jagers officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Irving Diffenderfer. Her gown, accompanied by a full-length veil of silk illusion, was of ivory velveteen with a long train, and she carried five white orchids mingled with lily of the valley.

Miss Margery Jane Diffenderfer was maid of honor for her sister, and Miss Nancy Anderson, daughter of Senator Clinton P. Anderson and Mrs. Anderson, was a bridesmaid. The bride's other attendants were Miss Joan Rowcliff, Miss Jana Pierce and Miss Jean Hartley.

William E. Block was best man and Lieut. Col. Donn Robertson, Jack Batham, George Bishop and John A. Kendrick were the ushers.

Big Radio Year, Too

Television Trebles Viewers in a Year

By Wayne Oliver

NEW YORK (AP).—Television in the past year has nearly trebled its viewers and now reaches one-fourth the homes in the United States.

Around three and three-quarter million sets were in use as the year began and final 1950 production figures are expected to show nearly seven and one-half million new sets made during the year. The total number of homes with television now is believed to be more than ten million.

It also was a big year for radio. Manufacturers turned out around 15 million new sets—third greatest production in industry history—to bring the Nation's total close to 100 million sets in use.

And combined—radio and television, broadcasting and manufacturing—they became a three-billion-dollar-a-year industrial giant wielding tremendous influence on the Nation's way of life.

BUT IT WAS NOT a year of unmixed blessings. In common with other businesses, the radio-television industry faced the prospect of sharp curtailment of its normal activities in favor of defense efforts. Some manufacturers predict cutbacks of as much as 50 percent in set production in 1951.

A freeze on permits for new television stations, imposed by the Federal Communications Commission September 30, 1948, remained in effect with no prospect for an immediate resumption of licensing of stations. Thus it appeared that few if any new stations were likely to take the air in 1951.

And year-end found a bitter controversy raging over the FCC's decision of last October 11 officially adopting the Columbia Broadcasting System's spinning wheel method of color television.

HOWEVER, it was largely a year of spectacular new achievements for television which once more outperformed the predictions of even the most optimistic.

Not only did television reach into millions of new homes, it also began to turn out top flight programs featuring some of the best known performers in the entertainment field.

Most of radio's top stars, such as Jack Benny, Fred Allen, Eddie Canton, Jimmy Durante, Bob Hope, Burns and Allen, became regulars on television. More and more film stars made regular or occasional appearances in variety shows and on dramatic programs.

BECAUSE OF THE FREEZE on construction permits, there was only a moderate increase in the number of television stations—from 98 in 58 cities as the year opened to 107 in 65 cities as the year drew to a close.

But there were major expansions of the Bell System's television network circuits by coaxial cable and microwave radio beam. From 8954 channel miles serving 50 stations in 26 cities, the network facilities were expanded to 17,344 channel miles serving 72 stations in 43 cities.

Many television stations began to make money and they and the four video networks were expected to gross 100 million dollars for the year compared with about 34 million dollars in 1949 when practically all stations were losing money.

Radio's 2900 stations and four networks probably will find their final 1950 business totals a little under last year's $413,784,000. The station total, about 100 more than last year, consisted of 2230 standard stations and 670 frequency modulation station. The FM figure represented a decline from a high mark of 730 reached several months ago.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

It Seems the Christmas Rush Is Over

Jack and Charlie's Lunch Room at 35th and Reservoir rd. is a stopping place for cab drivers. When a bunch of the boys were complaining the other day about the post-Christmas slump in business, C. E. Dalinsky of 1661 35th st. nw. was moved to write these lines:

'Twas the day after Christmas and all through the street . . . District Liners were stirring, half-dead on their feet . . . Little children were playing with toys on the floor . . . And the merchants were counting their profits galore . . . Meanwhile I, in my hack, did cruise all down the street . . . In vain search of some fares that would help make ends meet.

ADD DEFINITIONS

Louise A. Baldwin defines children as: "The secret of perpetual commotion."

HAVE A COAK

Rhymster Mary Ellen was crossing the intersection of Wisconsin ave., East-West hwy. and Old Georgetown rd., taking just enough of a short-cut to displease the driver of one of those big double-jointed trucks.

"Hey, lady," he yelled, "pedestrians are supposed to cross in sections."

Muses Mary Ellen: "It will be interesting to see how Cartoonist Coakley reacts to this advice."

As usual, I think you'll agree that our boy Coak was equal to the occasion. So far he's drawn everything but unemployment compensation.

HEY, JOE, DIG THIS

The Bureau of Labor Statistics announces that from now on its cost of living index will include prevailing prices of beer, ice cream, layer cakes, cola drinks and TV sets.

I wonder what the average Russian's reaction to "decadent capitalism" would be if he were permitted to know that these commodities are considered essentials, rather than luxuries, over here.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Affectionate, housebroken black personality kitten, junior miss size." (Emerson 2653.)

"Handsome, house-trained female bull terrier; good watchdog, must have fenced yard." (Shepherd 3742.)

"Housebroken, small 6-month-old chinchilla tabby kitten." (North 7210.)

HE'D ALSO MAKE A GOOD "HARVEY"

Richard L. Hawkins of 3024½ R st. nw. has been telling friends that he's just signed a long-term theatrical contract to play "The Consul," in that production's road company. Reaction ranges from incredulous to hilarious, depending on whether Dick's victims know that "The Consul" never appears in the play.

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. J. E. Fowler, jr., 2693 S. Nash st., Arlington, Va.: It's good of you to want to return the lost article to its rightful owner, but this column never uses items relating to things which have been lost or found. However, The Washington Post, as a public service, will run a free classified ad for finders. Call National 4200 and ask for "Classified."

Lieut. Col. Robert J. Master, 3317 S. Stafford st., Fairlington, Va.: It's an honor to know that one of our Give-Aways found a new home at Mount Vernon. And a pleasure to read such clean prose. Are you a former writing man by any chance?

THESE MODERN TIMES

Dorothea Andrews, just back from Greensboro, N. C., reports that there's a diner down there that advertises:

"Aviation Quality at Submarine Prices."

IN RETROSPECT

When the last thank-you letter is written . . . And the wreaths have all withered and died . . . When the clutter of Christmas is cleaned up . . . And you couldn't eat cake if you tried . . . We shall rest (and in faith we shall need it) . . . We'll lie down for an eon or two . . . To prepare for the next merry Yuletide . . . Which will set us all scrambling anew.

T. H. Russell
2011 I st. nw.

YOU CAN'T WIN

"This year," I told the lady at our house, "I'm making only one resolution. And that is that I will not print any list of '10 Best' anything."

"My, my," she murmured, "what some people won't do to attract attention to themselves."

THIS IS WASHINGTON

At a party the other night, a well-known local matron was displaying what is probably the silliest Christmas gift of the season: A gold-plated yo-yo designed to be worn as a lapel ornament.

CAN'T HAVE EVERYTHING

Columbia Technical Institute's "The Compass" carries this item in its current edition:

"Eddie Bassett has a new motorcycle jacket. The joker, according to Eddie, is that he spent all his money on the jacket and can't afford the motorcycle."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

MacArthur Puzzles Pentagon

By Drew Pearson

Trouble is continuing between Washington and Tokyo over General MacArthur's faulty intelligence. Ever since MacArthur's "bring the boys home by Christmas" statement and the failure to spot 200,000 Chinese Communists in North Korea, Washington has been skeptical about the supreme commander's intelligence reports.

Willoughby

Because of this skepticism, it was hinted, after the tragic retreat from North Korea, that MacArthur should replace his intelligence chief, Maj. Gen. Charles Willoughby. However, this has not been done.

Meanwhile MacArthur's public statements in Tokyo are frequently at complete variance with the confidential reports cabled back by his intelligence chief, and Washington, in turn, is puzzled as to which to believe.

For instance, MacArthur estimated publicly on December 2 that there were about 500,000 Chinese troops in Korea. (This was in direct contrast to his estimate just six days before that there were not enough Chinese in Korea to interfere with getting the boys home by Christmas.) On December 4, however, MacArthur upped his estimate to more than one million Chinese in Korea or on the border, while on December 15 he announced that "a bottomless well of Chinese Communists manpower continues to flow into Korea."

Opposite Reports

However, this was not what his intelligence chief was meanwhile cabling the Joint Chiefs of Staff. On December 6, just two days after MacArthur had announced his million-man Chinese army estimate, General Willoughby cabled as follows:

"Units believed to be on Eighth Army front are, west to east: Elements 50th CCF (Chinese Communist Field) Army, elements 66th Chinese CCF Army; 39th CCF Army; 40th CCF Army; 38th CCF Army; 42nd CCF Army."

If all these six Chinese armies were of full strength with no casualties—which is doubtful—the total Chinese force which sent the U. N. Eighth Army into a 120-mile retreat in less than two weeks was only 96,000 men.

Yet the U. N. Eighth Army had more than 100,000 front-line combat troops, not counting engineers and service troops behind the lines.

Since his early December estimate, General Willoughby has increased his figures on Chinese over-all strength. But even the revised figures do not materially change the picture. He now estimates that the total Chinese strength in Korea facing not only the Eighth Army, but previously facing the Tenth Corps around the Hungnam beachhead, is 285,000 plus 150,000 North Koreans.

The size of the U. N. forces is a military secret. But it can be stated that they are somewhat more than the Chinese strength.

It is supposed to require a manpower superiority of 3 to 1 to launch a successful offensive. Furthermore, it is an indisputable fact that we have complete control of the air while the Chinese have almost no artillery except that captured from us. Thus, even assuming the Willoughby estimates are considerably off, the Pentagon is puzzled over our precipitious 120-mile retreat. The immediate retreat is, of course, explained by the fact that we were spread too thin, but not the continued 120-mile retreat.

Poor Chinese Weapons

In mid-December, General Willoughby cabled the following description of Chinese arms equipment: "Battalion CCF Army with three grenades and rifle or Russian submachine gun per man and 300 North Korean army stragglers crossed Taedong."

In other words, each Chinese soldier had no more than three hand grenades and a rifle or submachine gun. This is extremely light firepower for an attacking army, but it has been about the average Chinese armament. Chinese troops have had no means of carrying ammunition other than ox or mule carts, and each man goes into battle with most of his ammunition on him, plus his rice for the next few days.

Another of Willoughby's intelligence cables to Washington about mid-December is interesting: "Lack of CCF on Eighth Army front. Due to deep withdrawal executed by Eighth Army, it is evident that enemy, lacking any great degree of mobility, has been unable to regain contact."

This is interpreted in the Pentagon as saying that the Chinese, lacking any means of transportation, were unable to keep up with the fast retreat of the Eighth Army. In other words, we failed to keep contact with the enemy, one of the fundamental rules of military strategy.

Another of General Willoughby's reports at about the same time, states: "Those well-versed in Chinese military operations stress an inherent lack of elasticity in planning and similar inelasticity in staff and command structure. Such deficiencies can only result in stereotyped campaigns, and hold offensive action to slow succession of limited objectives.

"It follows, then," continued General Willoughby, "that CCF high command, being unable to predict degree of success for his initial offensive of November 28, was confronted by the problem of immediately realigning his forces for the continuation of the offensive; or of continuing to objectives according to their set schedule."

This is interpreted in the Army Department as meaning that the Chinese were slow-moving, had only limited objectives, and never expected to run us out of North Korea so quickly.

If his intelligence is correct, Chinese manpower did not total anywhere near a million men, nor even near 500,000 men, but only 285,000 plus 150,000 North Koreans. In addition, the Chinese, according to Willoughby, lacked fire-power, air strength, artillery, could not travel with any speed, while their high command, being "stereotyped," could not regroup easily to take advantage of the U. N. retreat.

These are some of the facts which don't show up in the press dispatches from Tokyo. The inescapable conclusion is that either Willoughby is wrong or the MacArthur press communiques have been deceiving the American public.
